WASHINGTON — Unemployment fell to 7.9 per cent at the end of 1976, still slightly higher than when the year began, the Labor Department reported today.

December's decline from the year's highest level of 8.1 per cent in November brought some relief for Jimmy Carter as he prepares to assume the presidency. But the year-end rate was still only 1 per cent below the 1975 recession peak.

Wholesale Prices
Take Another Leap

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices increased 0.9 per cent in December to quicken the pace of business inflation in 1976, the Labor Department said today.

The report said wholesale prices rose 4.7 per cent for the year compared with 4.2 per cent in 1975.

Bell Looks Like
Only Trouble Spot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General-designate Griffin Bell seems to be the only Carter appointee who faces any opposition in his confirmation, so far. The Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday pressed Bell about his civil rights record and support of former Florida Judge G. Harold Carswell to be a member of the Supreme Court.

PARIS (UPI) — A French court Tuesday freed Palestinian leader Abu Daoud, 39, after rejecting arrest warrants from both France and West Germany. The move brought relations between Paris and Jerusalem to the point of collapse.

Daoud was flown to Algiers and was given a hero's welcome by officials of the Algerian Foreign Ministry and Al Fatah, the largest Palestinian guerrilla group, upon his arrival.

Passengers Get Off
Broken Down Ship

MIAMI (UPI) — The cruise liner Monarch Star broke down early Tuesday morning 18 miles off the coast of Cuba and her passengers were picked up by the Monarch Sun later in the day.

As a result of the ship's breakdown, passengers now have the option of remaining aboard the Sun for a 14-day cruise, or being flown back to Miami from Haiti today. If they choose to leave the ship they will receive a refund for the trip.

State Road Deaths
Continue Decline

ALBANY (UPI) — Figures released Tuesday by the state Department of Motor Vehicles showed that highway deaths in New York decreased in November 1976 to 189, down from 227 in November 1975.

The toll brought the 11-month count for 1975 to 2,186. That figure also was down from the 1975 level of 2,264, Commissioner James Melton said.

Melton said the number of fatal accidents — those involving one or more deaths — had dropped from 210 in November 1975 to 169 in that month last year.

Water Called Drinkable after Tanker Mishap

Kerosene Spill Won't Hurt Water

By SID LEAVITT

Freeman Staff

PORT EWEN — A 15,000-gallon kerosene spill into the Hudson River near Albany Tuesday shouldn't have any significant effect on drinking water in Ulster and Dutchess County communities which draw their supplies from the river, officials said.

"I'm not concerned at all," said Harry B. VanOrmer, Town of Esopus water superintendent. The river near Port Ewen is frequently subjected to closer spills without any effect on town water, he said.

"We have a lot of oil spills. This is just one you're hearing about," VanOrmer said.

The U.S. Coast Guard in Albany said a 1.8-million-gallon tanker owned by Rheinauer Transportation Corp. of New York lost an estimated 15,000 gallons of kerosene along 15 miles of the river just south of Albany, apparently after hitting an ice floe in the Stuyvesant area.

Although the spill is considered "medium" by federal standards, the N.Y. State Health Department said the kerosene probably would have an "insignificant" effect on river-drawn water systems as far south as Ulster and Dutchess Counties.

Nevertheless, communities along the river south of the spill were asked to check water supplies for possible contamination.

In the Mid-Hudson Valley, communities which draw drinking water from the river are the City of Poughkeepsie and Village of Rhinebeck in Dutchess County and, in Ulster County, the hamlets of Port Ewen in the Town of Esopus and Highland in the Town of Lloyd.

The Coast Guard said ship crewmen first discovered the spill at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in one of the tanker's two 100,000-gallon compartments carrying kerosene. The cracked compartment was repaired after docking near Albany, and about 15,000 gallons had escaped.

Lt. Steven A. McCall, Coast Guard executive officer, said the river is routinely traveled by ocean-going vessels which keep the ice open, but a recent period of cold weather has thickened the freeze and has made channel corners hazardous.

Although unworried about the spill, VanOrmer said the town treatment plant has a raw water tap for constant monitoring of the river. Even with kerosene on top, the plant's inlets could continue to draw uncontaminated water because they are 35 feet below the surface.

Emergency measures also include a special activated carbon filtration system and a temporary plant shutdown, if necessary. VanOrmer doubted either measure would be necessary.

The plant has never been closed from (See SPILL, page 5)

Former Saugerties Mayor May Be Fined

Gage Sentence Delayed

KINGSTON — Former Saugerties Mayor James V. Gage, charged with tampering with public records while clerk-treasurer of the Village of Saugerties, was sentenced "in a sense" in Ulster County Court this morning.

Judge Raymond Mino indicated that Gage would be fined, but set a hearing date on Jan. 24 at 10 a.m. for the purpose of determining the amount of that fine.

Gage had been indicted by an Ulster County Grand Jury in connection with the disappearance of more than $15,000 in village funds. After pleading guilty to the tampering charges, he resigned as mayor.

In his remarks in court today, Judge Mino said, "Part of the sentence will be a fine, to be made at the hearing to determine the defendant's (Gage's) gain from the commission of the offense." The judge also noted the case had received "a great deal of publicity," that Gage had claimed there was no financial gain to himself, and that District Attorney Francis Vogt had said Gage had gained monetarily.

Noted Judge Mino, "So we have 'a great controversy,' and, when the hearing is held, the court will determine if there was financial gain.

Gage remains free on bail.

Vogt told reporters afterwards that "the fine would be only one part of the sentence," and that it was his understanding that the judge's remarks today did not mean that Gage would get off with "only being fined." d446 Wednesday, page 1

The probe into Gage's connection with irregularities in the fiscal affairs of the village began in the summer of 1975, shortly after he had been elected mayor in March of that year. The probe had been conducted by the Ulster County District Attorney's office and, reportedly, investigators and auditors had gone back some four years in efforts to track down the missing funds. A state audit of the village's books, kept by Gage during his previous service as village clerk-treasurer, uncovered various discrepancies, including thousands in missing money and unauthorized salary payments.

The investigation never fully determined that the money involved was actually taken or stolen. Gage maintained throughout that grand larceny had not been involved on his part. He said he had simply entered on the books as received and paid tax receipts from local residents who had, in fact, not been able to meet payment.

Gage's insistence in not pleading guilty to grand larceny led to his indictment on the tampering charges, attributed in part to bad bookkeeping.

Gage served as village clerk-treasurer for 10 years under three different mayors, after being appointed to that position in 1964. He resigned as clerk in 1974 to run for mayor, and was elected to that leadership position by a slim 37 votes.

A lifetime resident of Saugerties, Gage was honored with a testimonial banquet in the spring of 1974 when he stepped

Elderly Man Robbed of Savings

PLATTEKILL — Nearly $6,000 in cash was taken from a 79-year-old Plattekill man Tuesday afternoon after he opened his door to three men who threw a blanket over his head and bound him head and foot before seizing the money.

Roy Connell of Route 32 reportedly held on to the cash in the belief that having that much money saved would affect his social security benefits.

Connell lost $5,700 in United States paper currency, $100 in coins and about $50 in Canadian currency.

He opened the door to three white males, one of whom was described as husky. Highland State Police declined to describe the men in any detail.

Social Security Administration Director George Habernig said today that if a person is receiving a social security check monthly, his benefits would not be affected by his savings. If however, he was receiving supplementary income from Social Security, based on need, it would affect his income.

Fact Finder Recommends 2-year Contract

UCCC Faculty Pact Proposed

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

Freeman Staff

ALBANY — A two-year contract, with a $500 across-the-board salary increase retroactive to January 1st, has been recommended for the faculty of Ulster County Community College by a state Public Employment Relations Board fact finder.

James A. Cashen of Clavarack, PERB fact finder in the current contract dispute between the college and its Faculty Association, yesterday recommended a contract from Sept. 1, 1976 through Aug. 31, 1978. He said the $500 increase should be prorated for the remainder of the contract year based on a 10-month salary payment schedule. He also called for a two per cent wage increase beginning Sept. 1, 1977 and a 3 per cent increase on Jan. 1, 1978.

Cashen noted that, prorated over the remainder of this school year, the pay raise would be little more than $250. But he said the eventual increase would provide a higher base salary for next year. "While such a proposed increase will not keep the employees in pace with cost-of-living increases or with settlements in surrounding community colleges," said Cashen, "it does represent an increased cost to the county at a time when expenditure increases must be kept at a minimum."

Other recommendations by Cashen in an effort to settle the contract dispute include:

- Payment for teaching more than the maximum 30 semester hours ("overload" rate) increased Sept. 1, 1977 by $15 each, and rejection of request for reduced workloads for Faculty Association president and other officers; selection of division chairmen to be determined by the administration after consulting with Association representatives.
- Sick leave accumulation raised from 150 to 165 days; qualified faculty to be encouraged to cover colleague's class in event of illness.
- Dean of Faculty to submit recommendations for promotion to president of college rather than a special committee.

DPW in Quandary Over Icy Roads

KINGSTON — With long-time city residents claiming that the streets and sidewalks of Kingston are in "the worst condition we've ever seen," the city's Department of Public Works (DPW) is claiming that it's doing the best it can.

"It's too cold for the salt to have much effect," said DPW Administrator Woodrow Diehl. "The salt just melts a hole in the ice without breaking it up."

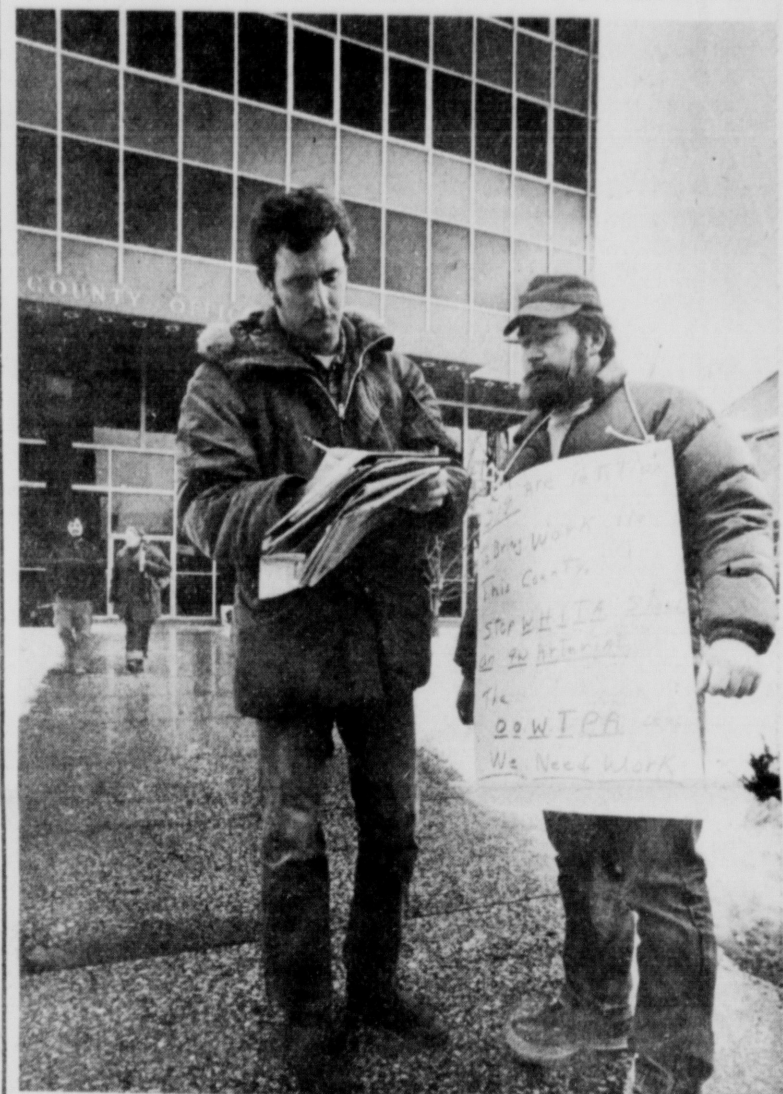

Diehl said the DPW is considering an "old fashioned sanding job," something which will undoubtedly cause clogs in the sewer system come spring.

On the question of the sidewalks, Diehl notes that that is a problem that should be dealt with by the individual homeowners. He says that neither the DPW nor the city police have the manpower to crack down on violators.

"The city charter says that we should clean the sidewalks and then bill the property owner, which we did last year, but we had a hard time collecting. Up until a few years ago this was never a problem because people took care of their walks. I don't know why people feel they no longer have to take care of their places," said Diehl.

ARTERIAL ACTION

Petitioner Counters Anti-arterial Claims

KINGSTON — WHITA's opposition to the proposed arterial highway in downtown Kingston is not supported by all the taxpayers in Ulster County and a Kingston man says he has 1,500 signatures to prove it.

Bradley Wilson, a construction worker who has been unemployed for 15 months, says he garnered the signatures in just three days on a petition in favor of the construction of the arterial. Bradley says he solicited the signatures in front of the local unemployment office. Yesterday he took his cause to the front of the Ulster County Office Building.

"People here have jobs and they're not as eager to sign as the unemployed are," said Bradley, "but even still, we're getting a good response."

As he spoke, his wife stood nearby and asked people to sign. The two of them have formed the Out of Work Taxpayers Association of Ulster County, a new group in support of the arterial. Bradley says he plans to get in touch with many of the signers and make the group a viable organization.

"I've got signatures from people who are losing their homes because they are in the path of the arterial, but they understand what it means to get jobs in this area. I've got even more signatures from people who are losing their home because they can't pay their taxes. We need work, and work will bring money into the area."

Last week WHITA and an ad hoc citizens committee known as CCTI learned that their attempt to force another public hearing on the arterial has been denied. The groups are planning additional action on the matter, claiming that the 2.4 mile roadway is unnecessary, costly and a burden on the taxpayers.

"There won't be any taxpayers if we don't get some work in this town," said Bradley.

Rough Referendum Road Blocks Arterial Foes

By ROB BORSELLINO

Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — Avenues to a referendum on the $35 million arterial through downtown Kingston may be closing fast, according to WHITA President Mary Mc Mickle.

The taxpayer group, which opposes the roadway, has been trying to force the matter onto the ballot for a vote, but they've learned a mandatory referendum is not applicable and an advisory referendum is not probable. The Kingston Common Council, the group which would have to give the go ahead on an advisory referendum, has supported the arterial and they're not expected to honor the referendum request.

"Maybe we're wrong in thinking that the people of Kingston don't want the arterial," said Ms. McMickle, "but if we are wrong, I'd like to have some proof. I can't understand why the Common Council isn't willing to listen to the people."

Ms. McMickle said that recent opposition to the roadway has come from Broadway businessmen who feel the bypass will ruin their businesses and from the local Conservative party, whose members are concerned with the cost of the project.

"With all the support we've been getting it's kind of discouraging that we're being ignored," said Ms. McMickle.

She said her group feels that Kingston Mayor Frank Koenig and the Common Council are beginning to view the $35 million roadway as a monument to their administration.

WHITA and others who are opposed to the arterial plan to attend the February 1st meeting of the Common Council and attempt to address the

A butane torch used to thaw water pipes was blamed for a fire that caused heat and smoke damage to the Thomas J. Murphy home on Churchland Road in Centerville Tuesday. Murphy told authorities he was trying to thaw frozen pipes in the cellar when the floor overheated, catching fire and spreading to wall partitions. Members of the Centerville and Cedar Grove Fire Companies responded to a 9 a.m. call and had the fire under control within a half hour. There were no personal injuries reported.

Scholarship Total One of State's Largest

Pageant Committee Seeking Miss Ulster

KINGSTON—Miss America is somewhere in Ulster County and the Miss Ulster County Pageant committee is determined to find her.

Noting that the local pageant's $1,850 in scholarship prizes is one of the highest awards in the state, the committee announced yesterday that it is seeking women between the ages of 17 and 28 who would like to compete for the honor of representing the county at the Miss New York State Pageant this summer and, hopefully, at the Miss America Pageant in September. According to S. James Mathews, this year's entries chairman, applications are now available by contacting him at his Kingston office or by stopping by the Ulster County Chamber of Commerce office. The Chamber sponsors the annual event.

In discussing this year's pageant, Executive Director George Leombruno emphasized that it is a scholarship foundation and he pointed out that the committee is interested in women who are talented, as well as in possession of good "physical attributes."

He also noted that talent does not only mean singing and dancing, but could also mean painting, gymnastics, photography, design or any one of a number of other abilities.

"There are no losers," said Leombruno, "because everyone comes away from the pageant with something good."

One person who said she came away from last year's pageant with something good was Faye Fogal, the winner of the scholarship who competed in Olean last summer for the Miss New York State title. In reflecting on her year as Miss Ulster County, Miss Fogal termed it "an experience in meeting people and gaining self-confidence."

In addition to the top prize of $1,000, two runner-up scholarships of $500 and $360 are also awarded annually. The money can be used to either further the recipients' education through accredited colleges or through private instruction in anything that might be considered a valid learning experience.

This year's pageant will be held at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School in Kingston March 26.

Nearly 2,000 Are Feared Dead

Volcanoes Erupt in Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI)—A volcanic eruption has killed nearly 2,000 persons in eastern Zaire, officials in the region said today.

The 11,400-foot Nyiragongo volcano, near the town of Goma in the eastern Kivu province, began erupting Monday. Today two new volcanoes started erupting in the same region, on the shores of Lake Kivu, where mountains tower more than 14,500 feet.

Kivu provincial officials confirmed the estimate of a death toll of nearly 2,000 made by diplomatic officials in Kinshasa.

Details of precisely where and how the victims were killed were not immediately available.

But the official reports said thousands of Africans from

Goma and the nearby region of Zaire — the former Belgian Congo — were fleeing across the adjacent border into the small neighbor states of Rwanda and Burundi.

The Zaire news agency said there was "considerable damage" to property but gave no details of the damage.

Two slight earthquakes shook the same region last week, before Nyiragongo started erupting. But the shocks caused no casualties and no damage was reported from the tremors.

President Mobutu Sese-Seko, absent from the country on a visit to Lome, capital of the West African Togo republic, sent his interior minister to the scene of the eruption to report on the situation, the Zaire news agency said.

A team of Belgian senators who have been visiting Zaire since Jan. 3 was in the Goma region when the volcano started erupting.

Lava spreading over the runways of Goma airport prevented regular airliners from using the airport. But a small plane sent by the Kinshasa government succeeded in landing and flying the Belgian senators out to Kinshasa after a 48-hour delay.

Diplomatic officials said the small airport was cut in two by the lava and the eruption made most roads in the region impassable.

Records showed the Nyiragongo volcano last erupted in 1972. But Zaire officials said so far as they knew there were no deaths recorded in earlier eruptions.

Suit Total Has Reached $765,000

Saugerties Schools Sued Heavily

SAUGERTIES — Negligence actions against the Saugerties Central Schools are running at an all-time high, with lawsuits totaling $765,000 already brought against the district and notice given that yet another claim has been filed.

Attorney Louis Francello told the Board of Education Tuesday night that a $265,000 suit has been filed by local resident, William Robb. The suit is a result of the alleged negligence on the part of a bus driver discharging Robb's daughter, who was struck by a car as she crossed the road.

The Robb suit follows in the wake of a recent $500,000 suit against the district brought by Sharon Lee Stasi. Mrs. Stasi's claim centers on her son and his possible permanent loss of motion and arm use, stemming from a fall from monkey bars on a school playground.

The board voted, on Francello's recommendation, to deny both claims and refer them to the insurance company. But Francello also said he would have recommendations later on a third claim brought by James Karanza. He did not indicate the reason for that suit or the amount of damages being sought. But he did say, with more interest than chagrin, "I never saw so many negligence actions as I've seen this year."

If lawsuits currently plague the local school district, so, too, do cases of after-school vandalism. After several months of exploring various solutions, the board voted to purchase and install a Hammond Security System in district schools. Initial cost of the "silent" system will be $3,300, with an annual fee of $180 for a telecommunication alert that reports any break-in to a central audiodetector.

In response to past complaints about the cafeteria program and the food served, and in the knowledge that this service is running in the red, the board agreed to seek outside advice on its school lunch system. The administration was authorized to discuss alternatives and recommendations on service and menus with the State Education Department.

Board members also joined a host of other local officials in Ulster County who have expressed dissatisfaction that their application for a federal Public Works project was denied. The district's proposal for a $575,429 multi-purpose building had not been approved. However members seemed hopeful that it might still be reconsidered.

In other business at last night's meeting, the board:

- Appointed Rev. John Needham, Robert Martin and John O'Rourke as a committee to meet with a similar committee of the Saugerties Teachers Association to develop procedures in regard to sabbaticals, a matter members felt had "serious financial implications."

- Took under advisement the fact that the following personnel will be eligible for tenure this year: Betty Larsen, Joseph Modica, Robert Moser, Robert Potter, Frances Buono, Janet Clarke, Nancy Dooley, Mary Elmore, Joseph Fondino, Barbara Hendricks, Dennis Jones and Sandra Ostoyich. Also: William Perks, Sharon Tynan, Maureen VanDeusen, Ermeinda Cuono, Phyllis Glassbrook, Ida Laufer, Robert Lawless, Kathi Lund, Gloria Meggison, David Mungo and Colleen Ryan.

- Heard trustee O'Rourke report that budget preparations are underway, based as much as possible on zero based budgeting. He noted, however, that with presentation of the budget due in March, and because accounting procedures are expensive initially, the totally "ideal" method of zero budgeting will not be fully instituted this year.

- Approved an extended leave of absence for Michael W. Piatek Jr. from September 1977 through January 1978. Piatek's request for "absence with pay as permitted in the STA contract, was subject to the superintendent's decision and whether a substitute would be necessary to fill his position during his absence."

- Accepted the following list of substitute teachers: Delores Kronenberg, Janice Bucci, Sally Sober, Peter Finger, Patricia Berg, Gail Ferris, Darlyn Hulbert, Carolyn Millonig, Donna Sharon Area, Isabelle Hackett, Roxanne Morrison and Patricia Steinhilber were named teacher-aide substitutes.

- Accepted the resignation of Mildred Gramlin, whose husband is being transferred, as lunchroom monitor at the Senior High School, and appointed Patricia Turco to that position. Also appointed as a typist at Mt. Marion School was Nancy Mower.

- Approved the Jaycee Associates Club as a new extra curricular activity at the High School.

- Authorized the approval of the initial request of BOCES services for 1977-78.

- Approved salary adjustments for part-time hourly bus drivers, print shop workers, and audio-visual helpers of $.20 per hour, all retroactive to Sept. 1, 1976. All employees involved will now receive $2.50 per hour.

- Changed the meeting hour of the regular monthly board meetings from 7:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. All meetings throughout the year will continue to be held on the second Tuesday of each month, and sessions will be rotated in various schools of the district by special announcement.

CAPITOL CAPSULE

Unions Critical of Governor

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A summary of state government news.

AFL-CIO
Gov. Hugh Carey's "State of the State" message contained a "most deplorable" lack of programs to boost workers' benefits, according to the state AFL-CIO executive council. The group, which heads the two-million-member union coalition, said Carey had failed to propose needed reforms in unemployment, workmen's compensation and sickness disability benefits. Earning support were Carey's proposals for a $200 million tax cut, as long as it does not mean reduced programs, and a $750 million capital development bond. The council complained that New York had slipped to 42nd in the nation in terms of total disability benefits, 34th in temporary disability help and 32nd in unemployment aid.

SENATE
In naming chairmen of Senate committees for the 1977 session, Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson has shifted four Republicans to new committee chairmanships. James Donovan of New Hartford replaced Leon Guiffreda of Centerville as chairman of the Education Committee. Guiffreda retired. Frank Padavan of Queens takes Donovan's place as head of Mental Hygiene. Roy Goodman of Manhattan will head Taxation and Governmental Operations. Caesar Trunzo of Brentwood replaces Goodman on the Housing and Community Development Committee. The new posts are worth a $7,000 leadership stipend or "lulu" for Donovan, and $5,000 each for Goodman, Padavan and Trunzo.

PAROLE
Forty Republican state lawmakers have sent a telegram to the Parole Board protesting Gov. Hugh Carey's commutation of the sentence of John Hill, who was convicted of the murder of a guard in the 1971 Attica prison riot. Hill is to go before a parole board this week for possible release. Sen. Dale Volker of Depew, a spokesman for the group, said in a statement, "Every citizen of the state who is concerned with upholding our system of justice and showing those who would rebuke it that cold-blooded murderers will not go free urge you to deny parole." The family of William Quinn, the guard Hill was convicted of killing, last week sent a letter of protest to the governor.

MAYORS
Representatives of the state's mayors say they are encouraged by legislative leader's appreciation of their communities' problems, although they have received no firm commitments. A delegation from the state Conference of Mayors met with Republican Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson and Democratic Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut. "It was a good start for the legislative year,"

Hempstead Mayor Dalton Miller, president of the conference, told a news conference after the talks. He said the delegation told the leaders reductions in state aid would harm localities and urged them to end compulsory arbitration in police and fire department contract disputes and to limit state-mandated programs. Miller said Anderson and Steingut were "cooperative," but added, "It's too early in the session to get firm commitments."

INSURANCE
Albert Todaro of Ossining was named as a member of the State Insurance Fund, the governor's office announced. Todaro, 40, is a senior trust officer with Chemical Bank. The fund provides workmen's compensation insurance to employers and ensures benefits for nonoccupational disabilities and for volunteer firemen, the governor's office said. If confirmed by the Senate, Todaro would serve a term ending Dec. 31, 1979, and paying $100 a day to a maximum of $3,000 annually.

SCHUMAN
Gov. Hugh Carey named Daniel Schuman, chairman of the board of directors of Bausch and Lomb, to the state Energy Research and Development Authority. The 60-year-old Rochester resident was a representative of the public on the unsalaried board, which studies new forms of energy and energy conservation. If confirmed by the Senate, he will serve until April 1, 1982.

French Release PLO 'Mastermind', Relations With Israel Near Collapse

PARIS (UPI) — Palestinian leader Abu Daoud stood in the stuffy Paris courtroom and told the four black-robed judges, "The only motive for my arrest was political. I demand my release." Hours later, the suspected mastermind of the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre was flying first class to Algeria.

In a move that brought relations between Paris and Jerusalem to the point of collapse, a French court Tuesday freed the 39-year-old Daoud, rejecting arrest warrants from both France and West Germany.

Israel termed his release a "shameful surrender" and recalled its ambassador in protest. A State Department spokesman said in Washington "our reaction is one of dismay."

The West German justice ministry called the French move a setback for "the fight against international terrorism," but officials in Bonn said privately they were relieved because the release avoided any chance of reprisals.

The bushy-haired, well-dressed Daoud was given a hero's welcome by officials of the Algerian Foreign Ministry and Al Fatah, the largest Palestinian guerrilla group, when he arrived in Algiers Tuesday night.

In a brief statement, he said his arrest was the result of a tip by Israeli intelligence and complained he was detained in a cell with common criminals.

Israeli military sources said Daoud had masterminded the 1972 Black September attack at the Munich Olympics that left 17 dead, including 11 Israeli athletes.

The French justice ministry said Daoud was picked up on a complaint by the West Germans, who then, according to the ministry, failed to follow up with a formal extradition request, leaving the French no choice but to release him.

Israel had filed an "extradition arrest" warrant but a French prosecutor said at the court hearing the French-Israeli extradition treaty could not be applied to Daoud's case because the terms affecting Daoud did not take effect until 1975.

If Daoud was indeed the brains behind the Munich massacre, his visit to Paris for the funeral of a PLO colleague started out as a far cry from the old days.

With other members of a PLO delegation, he was cordially received at the French Foreign Ministry on the Quai d'Orsay Friday afternoon.

That evening, French police called at Daoud's hotel near the presidential palace and said they wanted to talk to him "just for five minutes," he said later.

Instead, his lawyer complained, he was jailed "with a couple of hashish peddlers and a common Belgian thief."

Daoud, noting he was in Paris as a member of a PLO delegation, told the court he believed he was "protected by a kind of diplomatic immunity."

In Israel, relatives of the slain Israeli athletes responded to the release by demanding the French envoy be expelled.

"We cannot believe that an international criminal is free to go back to his family while we shall never see our husbands, fathers and sons," said Ankie Spitzer, widow of one of Munich victims.

Israeli Minister Calls It A 'Shameful Surrender' Allon Denounces Daoud Ruling

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — The release of Palestinian leader Abu Daoud by Paris police has brought relations between France and Israel to the brink of collapse, government sources said today.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon denounced the ruling in parliament Tuesday as "shameful surrender to the pressures of Arab governments and the threats of the terrorist organizations."

He charged France with violating extradition agreements between the two countries and called in French Ambassador Jean Herly to deliver a stiff protest.

Allon also summoned Ambassador Mordechai Gazit from Paris as a sign of Israeli anger.

Official sources said Israel was likely to call back more of its high-ranking diplomats for consultations that could last a month or longer.

Other measures could include renunciation of the extradition treaty between the two countries and even suspension of diplomatic relations, but such steps were less likely to occur, they said.

One source said the tensions that grew in recent months as France cemented its ties with the Arabs had begun to relax, "but now that hope is destroyed."

Relatives of the 11 athletes and officials slain in the Black September organization's attack on the Olympic Village in Munich in 1972 demanded the French envoy be expelled.

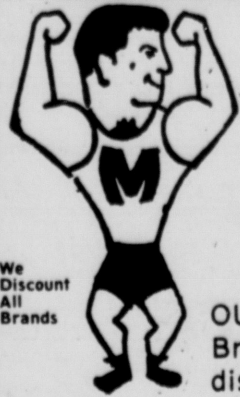

Israeli authorities have said the 39-year-old Daoud was one of the major planners of the attack.

"We have nothing but disgust for people who sell blood for oil," said Ilana Romano, widow of Olympic weightlifter Yosef Romano.

Ankie Spitzer, whose husband was coach of the Israeli fencing team, said, "We cannot believe that an international criminal is free to go back to his family while we shall never see our husbands, fathers and sons."

Opposition deputy Shmuel Tamir said the French move meant "a serious aggravation of relations."

"At the moment the French government is behaving as if some Arab countries are masters of the world," he said.

News of water supplies being subjected to chemicals other than the standard chlorine creates interesting psychological effects on water users, VanOrmer mused.

He recalled a lady in Kingston complaining some years ago that fluoride had loosened teeth in dentures she had left overnight in a glass of water. However, the water supply hadn't been fluoridated. The Kingston Common Council merely had discussed the possibility on a previous night.

Intuition Leads to Arrest

KINGSTON—A Town of Ulster police dispatcher's intuition led to the arrest Tuesday afternoon of a Kingston man who is alleged to have struck and injured two Hurley teenage girls on Broadway and left the scene of the accident.

Lawrence Scarth, 35, of Ulster Avenue Mall, was arrested by Kingston City Police for leaving the scene and driving while intoxicated.

Mary Albano, 18, of 25 Russell Road, Hurley, and Lynn Schufeldt, 15, of 27 Main St., Hurley, were taken to Kingston Hospital by Doctor's Ambulance.

Ms. Albano reportedly suffered a fracture and head and pelvic-abdomen injuries and Ms. Schufeldt sustained contusions and bruises.

Scarh was proceeding south on Broadway when the accident occurred near Andrew Street.

It was Joan McCloskey, dispatcher for the Town of Ulster Police who heard the report of a hit and run accident on a radio scanner about 12:30 p.m. A short while later she received a telephone call from the man believe to be Scarth who said he had been in an accident but could not elaborate further.

Ms. McCloskey put two and two together, informed Police Chief Meyer Levy who found the wanted car and Scarth at his trailer home near Michael's Diner.

Kingston City Police praised the work of the Town of Ulster Police Department who found Scarth so quickly.

Scarh was committed to Ulster County Jail pending a court appearance today.

Ellenville State Police report that Marchuck's sled was caught under the vehicle driven by Michael Smith, 18, of Walker Valley, who was travelling north on Maple Avenue.

No summons was issued.

Impressed by Family

Dear Sir:

I find myself at a loss to understand the reason behind the Legislature's refusal to include in the budget funds for Family of Woodstock.

As a person involved in the field of social services, I am not only impressed with the skills of Family, but grateful for a dependable, knowledgeable agency that is always willing to help. Their dedication is unequalled and reaches out in many directions. As for what is apparently the biggest bone of contention, namely, the runaways—I heard someone say, "If my child ran away from home I'd surely hope they'd have a place like Family to run to."

I fear too many of us are not seeing the whole picture and it makes me sad.

Yours truly,

Environment Test Awaits Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter's campaign promise to protect the environment will be tested this year when he is caught between the high expectations of conservationists and the growing demands of Americans for energy.

Carter appears to be the most conservation-conscious president to take office since Lyndon Johnson stalked the White House turning out lights. But unemployment and the economy clearly will be Carter's first concerns when he takes office, and there are powerful pressures present to counter-balance his wish to preserve the environment.

It is hard to predict whether Carter will try to "set a tone" of environmental concern or will be an activist seeking to clean up America's air, water and strip-mined lands. But if the new president tries to remain neutral on some of the issues, efforts will be made to force his hand.

"I don't think any of us are naive enough to feel we're not going to have fights with him as we did with Nixon or Ford," said Brock Evans of the Sierra Club. "But we (environmentalists) do expect more access and more consideration and better decisions. We certainly have higher expectations.

"Even if it's 40 or 50 per cent better, it's great," he added — "better than nothing..."

Rep. Morris Udall, in line to chair the House interior committee, told a National Wildlife Federation conference recently Carter has a good record, good understanding and good concern for the environment.

"We're going to be able to do a lot of the things we've wanted to do for a long time," he said.

Carter already has named Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, a moderate but respected conservationist, to head the Interior Department. And he promised to "bring concern for the quality of the environment to the White House."

Udall was floor manager of the strip-mining reclamation bill twice vetoed by President Ford because of its effect on jobs. The Arizona Democrat hopes to get similar legislation passed quickly with White House approval this time around.

Udall said other early priorities of the new Congress will be a federal land use policy and legislation to protect more than 100 million acres of Alaskan wilderness.

During the campaign, Carter pledged to restore and protect the ill-funded and short-staffed national park system and provide money for parkland acquisition. He promised to end neglect of the nation's wildlife refuges and said he favored limits on clearcutting in national forests.

The clash between conservation and energy is especially evident in a number of problems Carter may have to confront early in his term. These include offshore oil drilling, nuclear power development and proposals to strengthen or weaken clean air and water laws.

Carter has criticized the Ford administration for "abdication of its responsibility" to make sure atomic plants are safe, expressed concern about nuclear proliferation and said only "responsible development" of oil and gas should be allowed on the outer continental shelf.

Like Ford, he favors increased use of coal as a way to reduce the nation's reliance on foreign oil but does not have the same enthusiasm for accelerating western strip mining.

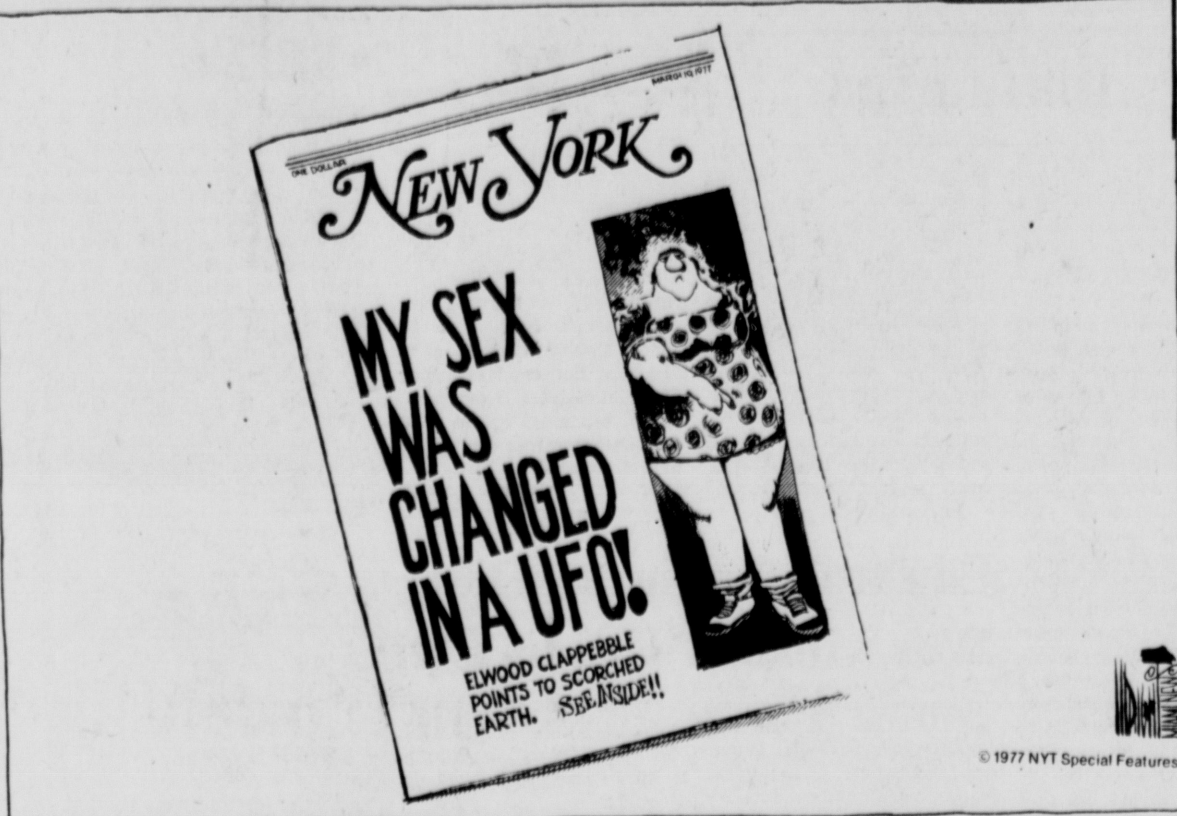

A compromise Clean Air Amendments bill postponing application of auto emission standards died by filibuster in the last Congress. Carter has not stated where he will stand on new legislation, but said in policy papers issued during the campaign auto makers must meet emission standards "just as soon as the times allow."

He said control of toxic chemicals into U.S. waterways will be an "immediate priority" of his administration, as well as other sources of water pollution. But he also noted many industries and towns will not meet 1977 standards for clean water and did not say how this problem should be met.

On other subjects, Carter has said he will halt construction of "unnecessary dams" by the Army Corps of Engineers and his administration will help strengthen the image of the Environmental Protection Agency.

A number of conservation laws were passed during the last eight years, especially following the first Earth Day in 1971, but many environmentalists feel Nixon and Ford only went through the motions of supporting conservation. Outgoing Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe told reporters a few months ago he didn't think Americans would respond to appeals to conserve energy unless they saw visible evidence of a fuel crisis — such as the long service station lines during the Arab oil embargo.

But Carter seems willing to try. He has not spelled out his policies, but even on inauguration day Carter is symbolizing his hopes for a clean, fuel-efficient future by using a reviewing stand equipped to produce solar energy.

Here Comes the Veep

WASHINGTON (KFS) - With the Inauguration almost upon us, we are beginning to get the little homilies about how the promises were not so much commitments as goals to be striven for and let's be practical. In this instance, the Peanut is already explaining to us that we should understand that even though he is contemplating increasing the war allocations he said he would cut, he is actually cutting them by increasing them less than he would have increased them if he hadn't cut them. If you have trouble following that argument, you may take comfort in the fact that you probably aren't alone.

At least Veep Mondale continues to get his picture taken with the President-elect. Moreover, instead of leaving off the campaign talk about the need and the utility of finding the Vice President worthwhile and ennobling work, the President-elect has said that this Vice President will actually have an office down the hall from his own and will function as the White House's chief staff officer, whatever that means.

If it means anything at all, it will mean that Walter Mondale will become the busiest and most powerful Vice President since Henry Agard Wallace (1941-45). By naming his wartime Vice President head of the Board of Economic Warfare, an office that did everything from pinpoint economically strategic targets for bombardment to carry out world-wide raw material procurement, FDR gave Henry Wallace more executive branch power than any man to hold the job since.

It may have been because Wallace had too much power that Roosevelt decided to replace him with Truman. Beyond his official power, Wallace had great stature: as the successful editor of the nation's most important farming magazine, as a businessman, as a plant geneticist, and as a Secretary of Agriculture who is still thought by some at least to have been the best we ever had. Wallace's greatest power, however, derived from his being, after Roosevelt himself, THE symbol of New Deal liberalism.

After FDR's death, Henry Wallace was to Harry Truman what Ronald Reagan was to Jerry Ford last summer - the authentic voice of the party in the minds of the most active and dedicated campaign workers. Inside the cabinet, Wallace, who continued to serve Truman as Secretary of Commerce, increasingly annoyed the conservative Missourian. (How conservative Truman can be best appreciated by the fact that in death he has been absorbed into the Republican Party where he is loved and idolized as he never was in life by his fellow Democrats.)

Henry Wallace could never have lived happily with a President who tried to settle labor disputes by demanding of Congress the right to draft strikers into the army and who is remembered by historians, if not by the popularizers of history, as the man who began the loyalty programs and blacklists to which the name McCarthyism was subsequently given. What drove Truman to fire Wallace was the man's continuous, public opposition to the President's declaring the Cold War, or as he used to put it, "getting tough with the Russians."

To the perpetual war Truman gave to his country, Henry Wallace said, "Our present program will result in one impasse after another which will eventually result in war a number of years hence; or it will provoke a war in the relatively near future... it will require at least five million men in the armed forces - and probably eight million. It will require an annual appropriation of at least fifty billion dollars a year... Once America stands for opposition to change we are lost. America will become the most hated nation in the world." Not bad for 1947.

The next year Wallace ran for president on a third-party ticket and got his ashes hauled for him by a mass media which ruined him by calling him a dupe, stooge and a pupil of the Pinkos. By today's thinking, Wallace's Progressive Party platform is almost tepid enough for Jerry Ford to run on... votes for 18-year-olds, federal aid to education, closing tax loopholes, "raising women to first class citizenship," and a federal anti-lynching law. Most important he was the last major public figure until Richard Nixon to advocate the practicality and necessity of detente, peaceful coexistence and disarmament.

The substance of Wallace's foreign policy and defense contentions was never debated. By depicting him as a dupe and his associates as fellow travelers, Truman avoided having to answer his arguments. Then 25 years later for a brief time they were resurrected, often by a generation that didn't even know the man's name, and for a few years we've had foreign policy debate again in America.

But that debate is waning. Carter and the bellicists he has surrounded himself with limit themselves to talking about budget cuts for arms for reasons of efficiency. It is suggested that it is very important that the Pentagon not "waste" money, as if the more than a thousand billion dollars spent on the implements of death since World War II weren't a waste.

Making the devil's distinction between waste-waste and efficient waste gives us no highly placed person in the government to campaign, as Henry Wallace did, against the waste for war per se. In the executive, in Congress, in the media, there are fewer and fewer who still speak of peace as an absolute and not as a strategic ploy in a re-declared Cold War.

Maybe Walter Mondale can be that spokesman, that needed peace leader. In so many ways he is such a good man you wonder what he's doing with Carter and those other new playmates of his. But a good man isn't a great man, and you can no more demand greatness of a fellow human than you can condemn another person for being a congenital nerd.

Loyal to the Home Team

The football season is over. For me, it's the best game in town. Maybe the only game in town. It's the coliseum in Rome. It's gladiators; King Arthur and the Knights. It's a gang fight in an alley. It's war; chess with shoulder pads.

I'm a Miami Dolphin fan. Yesterday, today, tomorrow. They were six and eight this year, which sounds like crooked dice. The sports writers speak patiently of busted knees. The Dolphins played badly. They didn't need loyalty when they were 17 and zip.

They need it now. They need 75,000 fans like me. We'll be there in August, following every play like 75,000 head coaches. It is the nature of the game to make snarling, roaring beasts of its fans.

I haven't met Don Shula, the head coach, but I know he's the best. He's a perfectionist; a teeth-grinder; a pacer who never wants to see third and long. The only reason he doesn't leave the sidelines and carry the ball is because it's illegal.

He's got the record book in his pocket. Sometimes he can sit in a dark room with his team and freeze-frame a blocker or a linebacker out of position four times. He likes to pace off first downs on the ground; a real estate man.

His assistant coaches sit in a glass booth next to our seats. They are formidable men. Mike Scarry, Carl Taseff, Tom Keane and Howard Schnellenberger watch the plays from high up, and phone their observations down to Shula.

There is a big hole in the side of their booth. Our Karen and Kathleen grew up learning a brand new language from these gentlemen. The girls' mother taught them to be ladies, to pretend that they heard nothing. And yet, when they become frustrated with school work, it is refreshing to note that they remember some of those short and obtuse words.

No coach in either conference can match Shula's record of 144 won, 47 lost, 5 tied. The coaching staff was better than the team, even when Miami won two Super Bowls.

The man behind the Dolphins is a half-Irish, half-Lebanese kid, Joe Robbie. He came out of South Dakota like a runaway rocket. Everybody knew that Miami was palm trees, sunshine and surf. It surely wasn't football, unless you want to count scores of high schools which seemed to have thousands of little kids in big helmets running all over the turf.

Robbie believed. He is the kind of fighter nobody wants to meet in an alley. He got the franchise when he didn't have the money. I didn't know that pro football players were paid every Monday for 14 Mondays until I met him.

Every Friday he flew to Chicago to borrow the payroll from a bank. They have a revolving door they plan to bronze and mail to Joe. He earned it. The Dolphins were the wrong team in the wrong town at the wrong time. If they won

4 and lost 10 it was a going season.

Nobody knows how Liz lived with him through those years. She's a little smiler who rolls with the punches. When Shula left Baltimore, he cut a fillet out of the Dolphins and shook hands with Robbie. "Stay off the sidelines," he said.

Geniuses are like geni. They are at their best when they remain in their own bottles. The Dolphins earned the admiration of both conferences and a seven-syllabled exclamation from Howard Cosell. The time came for them to fall apart - as the old Bears and Giants did and the Packers too.

The 75,000 head coaches point gravely to busted knees. They point to the loss of Warfield, Kiick and Csonka. It doesn't matter that Csonka flopped with the Giants and Kiick spends his time looking at mountains in Denver. They think that trading Jake Scott was a skull.

It doesn't matter. The reason I'm a Dolphin fan is because they are exciting to watch whether they win or lose. Even when they blow it, I spend a little time sitting, most of the time standing.

This year I heard Miami fans boo their quarterback. It's their privilege. It's a license that goes with a ticket. And yet a losing team is the test of loyalty. You sorrow with the men on the field. You grieve. You shout your anger.

The important thing is that you're there...

We'll Pay For Most Of Spills

WASHINGTON— With one oil tanker after another bleeding oil upon our seacoasts, the American people not only are stuck with the environmental blight but must also pay most of the clean-up costs.

The secret papers of the ship-owners reveal how they bamboozled Congress in the late 1960s to absolve them from financial liability. They anticipated the nasty oil spillages, which have now polluted our shores. They lobbied behind the scenes, therefore, to make sure they wouldn't have to pay the damages.

In fact, they foresaw an environmental catastrophe, which hasn't yet happened. Some day, they expect a giant, 200,000-ton supertanker to break up and belch 50 million to 80 million gallons of oil into our coastal waters. This would be enough to stain the surf and blacken the beaches for hundreds of miles.

We began to investigate the oil industry's awesome power to pollute after the tanker Argo Merchant broke apart on a shoal off Nantucket and gushed more than seven million gallons of oil into a pounding sea.

We made trips out of state and out of the country to question oil insiders. We obtained documents in both English and Greek, proving that the international petroleum and shipping industries blocked the laws, which might have saved our coasts from the oil blight.

In Athens, Brussels, Lisbon, London, New York and Rome, according to these documents, international oil men, shippers and insurance moguls conspired privately as early as 1967 to thwart the U.S. antipollution bills.

They were worried about the inevitability of oil spills. The huge supertankers carried enough oil to contaminate an entire seacoast. These long, whale-shaped sea monsters were constructed of such thin steel for their size, warned the experts, that they would rip apart if they should ever run aground.

Members of Congress, foreseeing the danger, began drafting some tough liability laws. This U.S. move could set a worldwide standard, which could raise insurance rates sky high or even make the supertankers uninsurable, the shipowners feared.

From their viewpoint, the most dangerous measures were introduced by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Me., and Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla. The bills would have assessed the clean-up costs to the industries that make a profit from oil.

The shipowners tracked these bills more carefully than they had ever monitored a storm at sea. "Prospects of the (Muskie) bill's passage..." warned one lobbyist gloomily, "are considered to be very good."

The shipping lobbyists were joined by the oil lobbyists. "The American Petroleum Institute will lobby to limit the liability of a shipowner," happily reported one agent to his Athens-based bosses.

Meanwhile, shippers and insurers met privately in Rome in late 1967 to consider the problem. This was followed four months later by another secret meeting in Lisbon. They finally agreed, according to a memo by one of the participants, to oppose "strict liability on shipowners for damage caused by the escape of oil."

They hoped to limit the liability of shipowners merely to a polite explanation. "The owners of a vessel from which oil has escaped, causing pollution, (should) explain how the oil was permitted to escape," it was proposed.

In case of a disastrous oil spill, in other words, the insurance-shipping crowd wanted to let the owners off with a simple account of the accident. It would be left to the victims to clean up the oily mess.

Representatives of the world insurance and shipping industries slipped up to Capitol Hill in July, 1968 to sell this idea to the House Public Works Committee. They paid a quiet call on Richard Sullivan, the chief counsel, who was processing the antipollution legislation.

"We were pleased to learn," one agent wrote back to his superiors, that Sullivan would "abandon" the idea of holding the shipowners and oil companies totally liable for their oil accidents. The lobbyists also "argued strenuously against (unlimited) liability for removal costs" of spilled oil. "Mr. Sullivan and his staff finally agreed," the memo reported triumphantly.

According to the document, Sullivan then "met separately with representatives of the American Petroleum Institute... Thereafter, another revision of the bill was prepared." This contained additional concessions.

Crowded one shipping representative: "We believe (the concessions) would accomplish as good a result as the shipowners and their (insurance) clubs could hope to achieve in any oil pollution bill which the United States Congress might pass." It should not, the memo added, "have any serious effect on the (insurance) premiums."

Yet even this limited antipollution measure was kept off the law books for two more years. It provided for a moderate boost in liability, with no real means for collecting on oil disasters.

Footnote: The able Sullivan, who was merely carrying out orders, told us he remembered the 1968 meetings. He admitted the memos made him "look like I was in somebody's pocket." But he insisted he had acted in what he thought was the public interest. "Maybe I should have been tougher," he said, sighing.

Plugging a Snow Day for All

Oil companies have a device to keep them happy which they call the windfall. They are not alone, though. Schoolchildren have their own kind of windfall, called the "snow day."

They, however, call it SNOW DAY!

The shout goes up at 6:30 in the morning when I'm trying to get through my last half-hour of sleep undisturbed.

Do they turn around, shuck off their clothes, and snuggle in for three more hours of slumber?

No, in a word.

They jump into their boots, coats, and mittens and, no matter if the snow is whistling in at gale force or it's sleet, they go out and shovel it, throw it, ski in it, roll in it—whatever they deem necessary to celebrate their windfall.

I suspect the snow day is what gives school-children—and teachers—a renewed faith in the benevolence of powers beyond their control. The snow day has religious significance.

Like the sabbath, it interrupts the routine of work-a-day institutions. But with an extra dimension. It drops from the wings of the wind, as though God-sent, unheralded. And all of our best minds put together can't predict it with certainty even an hour ahead of time.

A snowstorm, by itself, is not sufficient cause for a snow day. A foot of fine dry snow won't keep the buses from rolling. Dry snow isn't slippery.

Also, a snowstorm beginning at 8 in the evening and ending at midnight won't do it. The plows have time to get out and make the roads passable again before schoolbus time.

The crucial factors are temperature and timing. And I don't know of anyone who can time a snowstorm or set its thermostat.

The ideal conditions leading up to a snow day are (1) the storm starts between midnight and 5 a.m., (2) the snow is wet or mixed with freezing rain, and (3) it occurs on the eve of a weekday. Then you've got a winner.

Now, even if you're a meteorologist who dabbles in cloudseeding, you've got to admit that's a tall order. It takes something bigger than all of us to pull that off.

You may wonder where my vast knowledge of the snow day comes from. Well, not only was I a schoolboy; I was also a teacher. My recollection of the snow day is warm and fresh.

And I want to tell you right now that there are few phenomena in this life that contain the emotional healing power of a snow day.

Imagine your raucous alarm going off. You grope blindly and knock the clock onto its back. It's another morning in a long line of trudging mornings that stretches behind you for years. You keep your eyelids up through sheer concentration.

You see outside, through your eyelashes, a faint light diffusing the world. But it has a certain quality, as though there were...Yes, there is! Snow!

You're into the kitchen with an alacrity you haven't shown for months. Your hand trembles as you turn on the radio.

You aren't hungry at all. Coffee is plenty. You sit glued to the pre-dawn radio, listening to "Morning is bray-ing," to which you nod philosophical agreement but wish the station turntable would blow its fuse.

Finally the announcer. "And now the news. In Boise, Idaho, today..." All right, all right!

"Here are the latest school closings. Highland schools are closed, Poughkeepsie schools, Albany schools, Utica schools..." Then finally yours. Finally! All right!

You flip off the radio. Empty the coffee cup into the sink. That class you hadn't figured out what to do with can now be dealt with. (Later.)

The damaging juices of an ugly mood have been stemmed. All of those children you would have cowed today with irrational fright as they walked through your classroom door are now spared. The wrinkles you would have added around your eyes have been put off for another day.

You feel human, loving, patient. You smile on mankind. You go back to bed without bothering to set the alarm.

The benefits of the snow day go very deep into the human psyche. The next day man greets the students with a smile. Not just because the week is starting with Tuesday, but because (and this is what counts) he has been the beneficiary of a windfall. Uncanny coincidence has smiled on him. For once, surprise hasn't flattened his nose.

I'm coming out in favor of having the snow day declared a day off for everybody. Even the highway department and radio announcers.

John Betailier, Bill Skilling, wouldn't you like to wake up in the morning to a phone call from the county legislature telling you this day is a snow day?

And then just reach over, pick up your bedside microphone, and say, "Good morning, radioland. I have the pleasure to inform you that today everything is closed. This is John Betailier, Bill Skilling, signing off until tomorrow. We're not even going to tell you the frequency and the kilowatts."

Then all of us go back to bed with a renewed faith in windfalls. Except for the children, of course. They (hopefully) go out and celebrate.

Smith Still Adamant

The four Rhodesian—or Zimbabwe—black leaders who have been holding out in Geneva for more or less instant control of an interim government keep outbidding each other in intransigence. U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger may have promised the white Rhodesian Prime Minister, Ian Smith, that whites would be permitted to control the sensitive areas of government for a two-year waiting period while the ultimate forms of a black majority rule in Salisbury were hammered out. But the black leaders, eyeing each other, insist that the Kissinger formula must be considered negotiable.

There is Robert Mugabe, the socialist schoolteacher who has his relations with guerrilla fighters who base themselves in Mozambique. Naturally he considers that he would lose face with his foreign supporters, the source of guns and ammunition, if he were to accept Ian Smith's interpretation of the Kissinger agreement in the name of his Zimbabwe African National Union. Competing with Mugabe for domination of the Rhodesian future is Joshua Nkomo, an ex-trade union leader who heads the Zimbabwe African People's Union. The other factional leaders are Bishop Abel Muzorewa, an American-educated Methodist cleric, and the Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole, who disputes with Mugabe the claims to leadership of the African National Union.

Ian Smith, who, no matter what else may be said of him, is a tough cookie, considers he is quite within his rights in holding that Kissinger had made a hard-and-fast commitment to Rhodesia's 270,000 white minority. Moreover, he insists that the four black Rhodesian representatives at the Geneva talks cannot be accepted as majority spokesmen for Rhodesia's six million blacks even when one adds their partisans together. Since there has never been a proper Gallup poll of Rhodesian blacks, nobody is in a good position to say that Smith is wrong. So what is going to happen?

Let us suppose that, at some stage of the game, Ian Smith simply declares that he is willing to turn over the government to blacks who are ready to accept the Kissinger formula. He can certainly find them. Chief Chirau of the Shona-speaking tribe and Chief Ndiweni of the Matabele tribe both resigned recently from the Smith Cabinet to form their own indigenous parties. What impressed John Davenport, a former editor of Fortune magazine, during his recent trip to southern Africa is that many Rhodesian blacks have a quite justified fear of being ground to pieces between parties taking their cues—and their weapons—from abroad. Chiefs like Chirau and Ndiweni might be willing to stand apart from the four factional leaders in Geneva if they were to have assurances that an interim government would last long enough to take a plebiscite that would determine the true desires of Rhodesia's six million blacks.

Naturally, the Soviets, whose adherents now control the neighboring governments of Mozambique and Angola, would not look with favor on a plebiscite unless they were sure to win it. But Ian Smith would be in a favorable position to stall practically forever if his opponents were to block the effort to determine a true majority.

If Smith were to turn the government over to a black regime on his own in exchange for certain property concessions to the white minority, it would certainly clarify things. We would soon know the intentions of the Russians and the Cubans. If they were to move against an all-black Rhodesian government as they moved in Angola after the Portuguese had left, we would soon know the true desires of a lot of Rhodesian tribes. If they wanted to fight, they would have a legitimate claim to help from abroad. This might not serve to keep the Communist Left from pouring in the weapons from Mozambique to put a Communist stooge government in control in Salisbury. But at least the West would know the truth: the Communists are out to win in Africa with no particular concern for democracy or majority rule.

Knowing Smith for the tough hombre that he is, we may be sure he'll try to play it out to the end. He has nothing to lose.

Architecture to Tell It All

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Architects, while fine folks as a rule, tend at times to become aesthetically overwrought.

A classic example of rapturous overkill may be found in a press release from the 1977 Inaugural Committee describing the White House reviewing stand where President-elect Carter will watch next week's inaugural parade.

The committee, whose appreciation of the design may have made it a bit giddy, says the stand will make "seven statements" about Carter's "values and his basic philosophies."

By my count, that is four more statements than emanate from such architectural gems as Frank Lloyd Wright's Greek church in Wauwatosa, Wis., and Le Corbusier's chapel in Ronchamp, France.

Even so loquacious an edifice as the Taj Mahal only makes five statements, as I understand it.

The press release quotes one of the architects who drew up the blueprints as saying that "humility, closeness to the people, concern for the ecology, concern for our resources, historical preservation and even his policy on energy will be expressed by the design of this stand."

It says "the size, the canting, the materials and even the foundation will tell the people a lot about their president."

And it adds that the "starkly simple" facility will cost $170,000.

Leaving aside the question of how anything that costs $170,000 can be equated with stark simplicity, I fear the reviewing stand will be saying a lot more than the average parade watcher will be able to comprehend.

While the average parade watcher may be able to grasp what the structure's size, materials and foundation are telling him, any statements made by the canting likely will be over his head.

Which probably is just as well. For anything the canting says probably will be pure cant anyhow.

Bear in mind that the reviewing stand is only one of the architectural triumphs of the inauguration.

After reading the press release on the reviewing stand, I decided to see what sort of statements the inaugural platform might be making. Here are some of the things it told me:

—It is one of the biggest boondoggles of all times.

—Expenditure of a comparable amount of time, money, effort and materials probably would replace all the substandard housing in the average American slum.

Chrysler Fuel Book Available

DETROIT, Mich.—Cars with automatic transmissions are easier to drive than those equipped with manual transmissions, but how does that automatic option affect the gas mileage of the new car you're thinking about buying?

"In these days there is considerably more consumer interest in fuel economy," says F.G. Hazelroth, general manager of Chrysler Corporation's Service and Parts Sales Division. "Our 1977 edition of our consumer's guide to fuel economy is a basic, simple lesson in that new science."

The informative booklet, prepared for Chrysler-Plymouth and Dodge dealership salesmen, is available to the public at no cost. It explains many aspects of fuel economy such as engine size, drive train combinations, the effect of individual driving habits and maintenance practices, and the way various equipment options can boost or detract from miles per gallon fuel economy.

The brochure details how EPA mileage figures are obtained each year through a series of laboratory tests. All EPA mileage figures for 1977

Chrysler products are in the booklet and there are estimates of the effect of various equipment options on mileage.

Chrysler prepared a specially-equipped 1977 Dodge Aspen two-door coupe recently to demonstrate how driving habits can affect gas mileage. The car was equipped with special electronic odometer and fuel meters to permit exact mileage computation over short driving segments.

"Tests determined that mileage obtained can vary greatly when different drivers operate the same car under identical conditions," Hazelroth said, and added, "everyone believes that he or she is the world's greatest fuel economy driver until results are compared with other drivers. The point of our 'Guide to Fuel Economy' booklet is to help everyone get better fuel economy by ordering a car with their right equipment and then using the right driving habits."

The "1977 Guide to Fuel Economy" is now available at no cost by writing "1977 Guide to Fuel Economy," Chrysler Corporation, P.O. Box 7749, Detroit, Mich., 48207.

Little Opposition to Other Carter Choices

Bell Blocks Tidy Cabinet Lockup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Except for Attorney General-designate Griffin Bell, little opposition is shaping up to Jimmy Carter's Cabinet choices in informal Senate confirmation hearings.

Equally little trouble was expected for another Carter appointee, W. Michael Blumenthal. The Senate Finance Committee scheduled a hearing today to examine the nomination of the Bendix Corp. chairman as treasury secretary.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington NAACP office, planned to testify in the second day of hearings on the Bell nomination in the Senate Judiciary Committee today and to voice his organization's opposition to the appointment of the former federal judge who grew up near the president's hometown.

Liberal members of the committee pressed Bell in Tuesday's hearing about his record on civil rights and his support of former Florida Judge G. Harrold Carswell to be a member of the Supreme Court.

Bell acknowledged making "wrong" decisions on denying admission of black legislator Julian Bond to the Georgia House and on the use of federal wiretap procedures.

Bell said blacks in his home state support him. He promised to have a "vigorous civil rights division," use busing if need be to integrate schools, and appoint a black — U.S. Circuit Judge Wade McCree of Detroit — as solicitor general.

As for Carswell, he said he had not endorsed him, only recommended him, and he predicted that his tombstone would be engraved with the words "He wrote a letter about Judge Carswell."

Friendly questions and support were voiced at hearings for other Carter choices —

Cyrus Vance as secretary of state, Harold Brown as defense secretary, former Rep. Robert Bergland as agriculture secretary, and former Budget Director Charles Schultz as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

The Senate Agriculture Committee agreed unanimously to send Bergland's nomination to the full Senate.

Nearly every member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee prefaced his questions with praise for Vance. "I don't sense your confirmation is in deep trouble," Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, told him, smiling.

Vance said, "It was a mistake for the United States to be in Vietnam." As deputy defense secretary during the U.S. build-up in Southeast Asia, he said, "I made more than my share of mistakes" in formulating U.S. policy there.

Brown said he and Carter agree that $5 billion to $7 billion in waste can be cut from the Pentagon but it probably will be next year before the savings actually begin.

Brown also testified that it isn't necessary for the United States "to match the Soviet Union in every measure of strategic capability that one can think up."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said he saw "no problem at all" in Schultz being confirmed as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. "You will be an outstanding chairman," Proxmire told the economics professor.

GE Agrees on Repairs for 36,000 Microwave Ovens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Electric has agreed to repair a potential radiation leakage problem in 36,000 microwave ovens already installed in homes across the country.

The Food and Drug Administration announced Tuesday it was requiring the repair program — its largest ever involving microwave ovens — "because the door seals on these ovens can deteriorate with use, resulting in a leakage of microwave radiation above that permitted by FDA's strict safety standard."

through October, 1975.

"The repair program is designed to assure that the door seals will meet our safety standard for the entire life of the ovens," the FDA said. "We see no danger from consumer use of the ovens during the time it will take to repair them under this precautionary program."

The FDA said GE will begin notifying owners of the ovens in February that they will be visited by a repairman, giving the party involved about two weeks notice of the visit.

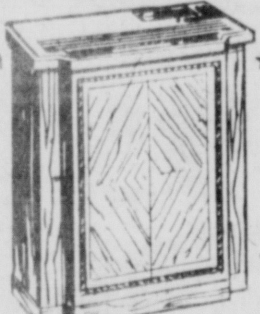

The government has rules governing microwave radiation because excessive amounts can cause problems ranging from burns to interference with electronic heart pacemakers.

This Air Company Features Personalized Service for Animals

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Richard Burns runs an airline for pets.

"Business is good, although it's just been dogs and cats so far, but I'm willing to fly any kind of pet that's manageable," says the mild-mannered Cincinnati grandfather.

While big airline companies crate animals like cargo, Burns' company features personalized service.

"The dogs and cats sit on seats right with me in the plane," he said in an interview. His Animal Air Transport consists of one plane, his own single-engine four-seater, and one pilot, himself.

The biggest selling point is Burns' other occupation: he's a veterinarian.

"I stress responsibility," he said. His veterinary career spans 23 years, and he operates an animal hospital in Cincinnati.

"A lot of people worry about the safety of their pets on big airlines, but I've been flying pets for nearly four years now, and I haven't lost an animal yet. People know the only way they will lose their pet is if I crash."

He is as comfortable at the controls of a plane as he is with his animal passengers.

An Air Force major in World War II, he flew 73 missions over the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. Both he and his plane now meet the same FAA requirements that apply to pilots of company planes for executive use.

He bought his plane originally for personal use.

"... but found I wasn't flying it as much as I thought I would. So to find a purpose for the plane, I came up with flying pets."

His market is bigger than most people might think. Burns books a trip almost every weekend.

"It's mainly when people move great distances. They love their pets and want them to get good care when they travel."

Because the veterinarian

works at his animal hospital throughout the week, he doesn't feel obligated to make a profit on his weekend trips.

"I keep my rates relatively low to keep business up," he said. "I get as much out of the trip as the owners of the pets. I love to fly and go places."

His fares are 30 cents per air statute mile, and he only charges for one way. This means his 16 cents per mile operating cost totals 32 cents a mile for the round-trip.

Burns said he has had no bad experiences with the animals in the plane.

"I never lock dogs up in cages and they've always been good. Even when big dogs like boxers are hyper on the ground before the trip they seem to relax in the air. I don't know if it's the drone of the engine or what, but they usually just sack out on the seat beside me or behind me."

"I also keep cats on the seat, but I do have to put them in a carrier because they're so curious. They would wander all over the plane and before I knew it they'd be snooping around my feet on the rudders and we might have problems."

If bad weather forces an overnight stop in some intermediate city, Burns and his animal passengers go to a motel.

"I only go to motels where they accept animals," he says. "I never leave my passengers during the trip. If I have to lay over and know I'll be delayed in arriving, I always telephone the pet owner to let him know the pet is with me and safe."

Burns says he enjoys every trip.

"Planes and pets, that's just the right combination for me," he said. "Of course, I do dream about a larger plane for more animals."

Richard Burns and "passenger."

WOODSTOCK — It's too bad squirrels can't read signs. One with an adventurous nature took a side trip along one of Central Hudson's power lines Tuesday morning and failed to heed the warning that he was perilously close to the main line to the Woodstock Substation.

Thirteen thousand volts later, 645 customers were without service and the little squirrel had gone to that great forest in the sky.

Power went out at 8:13 a.m. and was restored at 9:55 a.m.

Correction

ULSTER—Lloyd's Red Barn, Boice's Lane and Morton Boulevard in the Town of Ulster, and the New Paltz Red Barn advertised U.S. No. 1 Maine potatoes at 79 cents per 10 pound bag. The correct price should have read 89 cents.

French Boy Joins Port Ewen Troop

PORT EWEN—With the admission of Michel Marcellin of LaGaude France to membership, Boy Scout Troop 26 of Port Ewen takes on an international aspect.

Michel's father, an IBM employee at the LaGaude laboratory, has been assigned to the Kingston IBM complex for a year. Wanting to savor as much as possible of the American experience, Michel joined the local troop.

Language problems have been aided by the fact that Scoutmaster Ed Karabec worked as an interpreter in France and his son Ed, a scout in Troop 26, spoke French before learning English. Committee chairman Felix Van Campenhoudt who is very active with the troop also is fluent in the French language as he was born in Belgium.

Port Ewen scouting has a tendency for the international. A few years ago, Mrs. Elmer Lyons, a Canadian citizen, was one of the very first people, not an American citizen, to hold the job of den leader in the United States.

SCOUTS

City Girl Scouts On Busy Schedule

KINGSTON—Kingston Neighborhood Association Girl Scouts are looking forward to a busy schedule.

At a business meeting held this week at the First Presbyterian Church, leaders discussed plans for the annual Taste Treat at the Kingston Armory on Feb. 26. Also upcoming is the Girl Scouts 65th Family Reunion Anniversary to be held at Rondout Valley High School March 12.

Spring activities will include a Neighborhood Weekend at Camp Wendy.

In reviewing December activities it was noted that scouts throughout the city performed good deeds for friends and neighbors.

Brownies of Troop 110, Edson School visited Hutton Nursing Home and were invited back for a repeat of last year's Easter Egg Hunt. Brownies of Troop 214, Kennedy School, and Troops 99 and 229 of George Washington School, went caroling at the Hudson Valley Nursing Home and Kingston Plaza.

Junior Troop 6 continued their Adopt-a-Grandparent program of monthly visits to Hadler's Nursing Home on Albany Ave. Other troops made favors for shut-ins and caroled in areas near their troop meeting places.

Cadette Scouts of Troop 175 participated in a two-day ski program at Belleayre which included lessons and recreational skiing.

The leader's holiday social was held at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Pangburn with approximately 40 adults attending.

An Appeal for Leaders Issued in New Paltz

NEW PALTZ—Boy Scout Troops 172 and 272 of New Paltz, associated with the Reformed Church are in need of adult leadership especially assistant scoutmasters.

The troops are presently serving approximately 65 members. The scout committee is calling on parents and other interested persons to donate their time.

An assistant scoutmaster must be an adult male 18 years of age or older. He is directly responsible to the scoutmaster for all aspects of the scouting program including the weekly troop meeting and monthly scout leader meeting. In addition the troops are active monthly in an overnight camping-type activity.

Any eligible member of the community willing to volunteer their services may contact Thomas Benenati, committee chairman. If no adult leadership is available it might be necessary to curtail the scout program, Benenati said.

New Paltz Private Is Recruiter Aide

Harold S. Isen

KINGSTON—Army Private E-2 Harold S. Isen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mel Isen of New Paltz, is giving the U.S. Army Recruiting Station in Kingston a boost for 30-days as one of 450 recruiter aides being assigned nationwide.

PV2 Isen, 18, has completed his basic and advanced individual training as a helicopter repairman at Fort Rucker, Ala.

A 1976 graduate of New Paltz High School, PV2 Isen enlisted in the Army through the Kingston Recruiting Station in August, 1976. He has returned to assist the Kingston and Ulster County Recruiters at their request under the new recruiter aides system.

According to Sergeant First Class Paul J. McCants, commander of the Kingston and Ulster County Recruiting Station, PVT Isen's job will be to assist the local recruiters for a 30-day period while enroute to his first duty station.

Recruiter aides tell their friends, especially high school seniors, about the army and encourage them to talk with recruiters about army enlistment.

SFC McCants said the new program will generate quality leads for army recruiters rather than attempt to enlist individuals for a particular unit. The new program will significantly improve quality recruiting for the army with its emphasis on high school graduates, the sergeant said.

Parents Should Control TV

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Representatives of the broadcast industry suggest that parents take more responsibility for the impact of television on their children.

Estelle Gould, director of community affairs for WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh, testifying at the National PTA's first regional hearing on television violence, said the most important item is "control of the set."

"A family should watch together," she said.

"I'm not a psychologist, psychiatrist or a teacher, but I have been told by people who are that if an adult watches with a child and is available for an explanation there is less chance of harm from violence and from frightening subject matter."

Roy Danish, director of the Television Information Office in New York, said:

"We broadcasters are doing a great deal to remove gratuitous violence. And more can and will be done in this area. But it would be wrong to present a picture of the world in which there is no conflict — and no aggression."

"And it would be wrong to place the sole responsibility on the broadcaster — parents and educators have a responsibility, too."

Danish discussed what is known about television as a cause of violence in the real world.

The most ambitious investigation was made four years ago under the aegis of the U.S. Surgeon General. It cost more than $1 million and involved dozens of researchers. "The studies did not conclude with a clear-cut indictment of television," Danish said.

Mrs. Gould, in television since 1950 and also the parent of a college-age son and a daughter in the ninth grade, spoke both as a representative of the television industry and as a mother of two.

"I fully admit that there is violence on television," she said.

"But it is worth remembering that ours is not the first society to merchandise violence as a form of entertainment."

"Violence has always been a part of art, from Greek tragedy

through Shakespearean drama, up to modern times.

"Since the earliest two-reel Mack Sennet comedies, violence has been a staple of movies, though it has expressed different attitudes and different social values over the years."

"The violence shown is a reflection of what is happening in the world. Television is a mirror of conditions ... it does not initiate them."

Danish said the amount of violence on television is being cut down. According to a study done for CBS, the incidence of violence in prime time on the three networks was cut 24 percent from 1974-75 to 1975-76. The study spanned a 13-week period.

"The current season," Danish said, "has fewer programs with an opportunity for violence. And in every time period with series programs the viewer has the choice of at least one nonviolent network show."

"The possibility of lack of choice does occur on parts of three evenings where two movies are shown at the same time — but a check of schedules for this past season shows that both movies contained violent scenes only one time out of five."

"And of course, there is the alternate programming provided by stations not affiliated with networks and by public television stations as well ..."

"The three networks also have specialists who preview all programs and work with producers at all stages of script development," Danish said.

"The networks, like most stations, subscribe to the Television Code of the National Association of Broadcasters. The networks and the Code Authority employ 150 persons at an annual cost of $4 million."

"The Television Code recognizes that children should be exposed, at the appropriate times, to a reasonable range of the realities which exist in the world," Danish said.

"There are programs that deal with history, government and biography, with biology and astronomy, with the environment and animal life and with the seas and the stars."

"Youngsters are literally given a worldwide view of people and places through tele-

It Takes 22 Seconds To Rip Off a CB Unit

By UPI

A crafty "chicken snatcher" can rip off a mobile CB rig in precisely 22 seconds, according to one New Yorker who declined to say how he knew.

A police captain in Michigan estimates that the average life of a CB radio in a car is just 28 days.

In one Southwest city the lifespan of a car unit is even shorter — 16 days.

"The theft of CB auto radio transceivers has become the biggest single object of larceny in the U.S. today," says Wilbur Rykert, executive director of the National Crime Prevention Association in Washington, D.C.

The "chicken snatchers" or "midnight shoppers," as thieves are known in CB lingo, have found a lucrative black market for radios, just as they did for auto tape players a few years ago.

"There is a tremendous black market for CB radios," says Bill Kanner, editor of CB World magazine. "There are flea markets on Long Island where you can get a practically new rig for about $15."

And law enforcement officers and insurance companies expect even more thefts with the coming on the market of the new 40-channel sets.

The thievery has already led to higher insurance costs for CB operators in some areas.

"The rates established for auto insurance never anticipated such heavy losses," said John P. Kennedy, vice president of Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies.

To help police return a stolen set to its owner, the radio should be engraved with a personal identification number, such as a serial number or a driver's license number.

And to help dry up the black market, buy from only established retailers.

Last Great Herds of Wildlife Face Extinction

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The world's last great wildlife herds are facing extinction. Within five to 10 years, the vast herds of elephant, rhino, lion and other species which once roamed East Africa's plains will be wiped out, according to experts.

The human population explosion, the destruction of the environment and a continuing drought have all played their part in decimating earth's last great concentration of game. But the biggest threat of all has come from organized gangs of poachers armed with bows and poison arrows, wire snares, poison darts, muzzle loaders and machine guns who are often protected by the highest authorities in the area.

Foreign experts have been protesting for years the herds are in great danger.

Some African governments, newspapers and the public are at last also beginning to sense the end may be near and it is probably too late to now save the herds.

Figures, often imprecise and difficult to obtain, are nevertheless appalling.

In the last six months in Kenya's Tsavo Park, 1,040 elephants, 235 rhino and 20 leopards were reported killed and the overall elephant population declined from 36,000 in 1973-74 to a little more than 20,000 in June of 1976.

In the Nairobi National Park on the outskirts of the capital zebra have declined from 15,000 to 1,500 in the last two years.

World renowned wildlife artist David Shepherd said in a recent interview Kenya's 100,000 elephants were being poached at a rate of 10,000 a year and would be extinct in a decade. Kenya member of parliament John Konchellah said 16,000 elephants in the Mara reserve in western Kenya had been poached since the start of the year.

Kenyan legislators demanded an inquiry into alleged complicity in the poaching racket by sections of the Ministry of Tourism and Wildlife.

They produced figures which reportedly showed that though more than 600 tons of Kenyan ivory had been imported into Hong Kong and Japan, only 114 tons of this same ivory had been "officially" exported from Kenya itself.

Wildlife officials estimate poachers would have to shoot 30,000 elephants to produce 500 tons of ivory.

Minister Mathews Ogutu denied ministry complicity and defied strong parliamentary and press pressure to resign his office.

The situation in surrounding countries was less clear, though reports available from Tanzania, Uganda and Ethiopia all pointed to widespread poaching and destruction of the herds there as well.

An official report said 543 poachers had been arrested in Tanzania in the first few months of the year, the bulk of them in the famed Serengeti Park.

Thousands of elephants in Tanzania have been slaughtered in recent years and the ivory shipped to China to help pay for the Chinese-built Tanzam railroad from Dar es Salaam to the Zambia copper fields.

A favorite sport of President Idi Amin's unruly troops in Uganda has been to gun down vast numbers of elephants with machine guns, reports said, and even the crocodile population on the River Nile has been decimated in the same manner. Game wardens in Uganda are powerless to intervene.

In Ethiopia recent news reports said that country's most popular game park, the Awash National Park, has been invaded by domestic animals such as cows and sheep from surrounding tribes and lion and cheetah have all but disappeared.

There has been an ominous new development in Kenya's northern areas where heavily armed bands from neighboring Somalia have begun to launch well organized raids into the interior, wiping out entire species in some regions.

Kenya's Lake Nakuru which was once home for two to three million pink flamingoes is now also threatened with strangulation and death, apparently by industrial pollution. Many of the birds have already left what was once described as the greatest bird spectacle in the world.

The World Wildlife Fund, whose contributions to Kenya since 1961 have topped $25 million, announced last fall it had imposed a moratorium on all fresh financial aid to Nairobi.

Bill Monks, the fund's local secretary, was quoted as saying, "we are not convinced of the government's good faith concerning wildlife conservation."

The world environment report of the U.N. environment program said public opinion in Kenya was at last taking note that "the national parks of Kenya, which contain the world's last great reservoir of wildlife, are being subject to massive and unprecedented depredation."

"Reports are circulating that organized gangs of poachers operating on a commercial scale are obliterating game at such rapid rate that even common animals face the danger of extinction."

Legislators demanded establishment of a special select committee to investigate the threat to wildlife and the ministries allegedly involved, but parliament recessed for a vacation without taking any action.

Members of President Jomo Kenyatta's family, including wife Mama Ngina and daughter Margaret, the Mayor of Nairobi, in the past have been named in some circles as having been involved in the poaching racket — moving the official Kenya news agency at one stage to release a five-page report denying the charges as blackmail and scandal.

This same report said statements the elephants would be wiped out with a decade were "guesswork."

Poaching is the most serious threat to the herds, but not the only one.

A drought which has persisted for several years has killed off thousands of animals.

East Africa has one of the highest birth rates in the world and wildlife conservationists concede that governments will always put people before animals in allocating valuable land.

Large tracts, however, have already been turned into virgin to make charcoal which is sold at a high profit in the Middle East.

But as the rain forests have tual desert because of human destruction of the terrain. A major industry in Kenya is to chop down any and all trees been cut down, the surrounding areas have been turned into wastelands as the weather pattern was altered.

Even the Natural Gas Freezes as Cold Continues Midlands Grip

(By UPI)
Its so cold in the nation's midlands that even natural gas is freezing.

Arctic temperatures froze a natural gas line near Phillips, Neb., Monday, knocking out heat for several hours, and subzero cold in some areas of the upper Midwest turned natural gas to a useless jelly and kept propane gas from vaporizing.

Demand for fuel oil outstripped supplies in some areas and some utilities curtailed services.

The eastern two-thirds of the nation shivered from a raging snowstorm that dumped heavy snow from the Midwest to New England.

That storm has been blamed for at least 52 deaths.

The mercury plunged to 35 below zero in the upper Midwest and to 20 to 25 below zero in the Ohio Valley and the Ozarks Monday.

Frigid weather extended from the Northern Plains to the Eastern Seaboard today. Temperatures in the 30-below range were forecast for Minnesota, North Dakota and Wisconsin.

Oswego Buried by 18 Inches

(By UPI)

Some improvement was in sight after two-days of heavy snowfall in some sections of New York State, but the weatherman promised very cold temperatures would linger across the state for at least another day.

The National Weather Service predicted cloudiness throughout much of the state today with snow and flurries. The weather service, however, said it appears that the snow should be much lighter than the amounts which fell in part of the state Monday and Tuesday.

Among the hardest hit areas Tuesday was the city of Oswego, on the southeastern shore of Lake Ontario. A state of snow emergency was declared in the city Tuesday after 18 inches of snow fell on the area since the storm began Monday.

Oswego police said no traffic was moving in or out of the city which has a population of about 24,000. Officials estimated that the snow was falling at the rate of about two to three inches an hour, on top of the four-foot drifts which had already fallen.

The mid-section of the state was the victim of a "lake effect" storm which drifted further south than usual, the weather service said.

Winds of up to 40 miles per hour whipped the snow throughout the Syracuse-area and caused the cancellation of flights at Hancock Airport. The snow also caused schools in eight surrounding counties to cancel classes.

Many industries canceled second shifts in the Syracuse area and many workers were sent home early because of the storm.

In the western half of the state, residents continued to dig-out from a storm Monday which the national weather service called the worst in the area in "four or five years."

Most schools in the Buffalo and Rochester areas closed for the second straight day Tuesday. Four deaths in the Buffalo area were blamed on the storm, which dumped up to a foot of snow.

The national weather service predicted temperatures to dip to near or below zero tonight, with the possibility of new snow in Western New York Thursday as a new low pressure system advances into the state.

Columbia Village Seeks Aid

PHILMONT, N.Y. (UPI) — Columbia County officials said Tuesday they would seek state and federal aid for this fire-ravaged village, in the aftermath of a blaze which destroyed a plastics company and several nearby buildings. Sheriff Paul Proper said a representative from Gov. Hugh Carey's office in Albany was being sent to survey the damage at the X-Tyl International Corp. from an hours-long fire that destroyed a factory and four other buildings, forced evacuation of more than 30 families and caused minor injuries to 31 persons, including firemen. Proper, who said no monetary estimate was available, said the county would seek aid in whatever form available. He said the village of 1,700 persons was virtually off-limits to traffic during the fire. Electricity was later restored in the fire area, and crews worked to get phone service back in operation.

consin and freezing temperatures were expected from Louisiana to northern Florida.

Two major power companies in Michigan — Consumers Power Co. and Detroit Edison

Co. — declared temporary electric emergencies Monday because of bitter cold and reduced voltage in their systems by 5 per cent because of heavy demand.

The Mississippi Valley Gas Co. announced severe curtailments of natural gas for industrial customers in 118 Mississippi towns and cities. "We have never experienced temperatures such as this," a spokesman said.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, strapped by severe cold, said it may have to order power cutbacks — affecting industries and other large users first — unless the power drain diminishes.

Jerry Everett, executive director of the Northwest Petroleum Association in Minnesota, said the prolonged cold wave has created "severe strain on all energy products."

"If it continues this severely cold," Everett said, "we may need to go into an emergency situation this weekend or early next week."

At least five ships — including one tanker — were locked in ice on the Great Lakes. Bank-to-bank ice slowed tra-

Jobless Dips To 7.9 Pct. Mark

WASHINGTON — Unemployment fell to 7.9 per cent at the end of 1976, still slightly higher than when the year began, the Labor Department reported today.

December's decline from the year's highest level of 8.1 per cent in November brought some relief for Jimmy Carter as he prepares to assume the presidency. But the year-end rate was still only 1 per cent below the 1975 recession peak.

Wholesale Prices Take Another Leap

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices increased 0.9 per cent in December to quicken the pace of business inflation in 1976, the Labor Department said today.

The report said wholesale prices rose 4.7 per cent for the year compared with 4.2 per cent in 1975.

Bell Looks Like Only Trouble Spot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General-designate Griffin Bell seems to be the only Carter appointee who faces any opposition in his confirmation, so far. The Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday pressed Bell about his civil rights record and support of former Florida Judge G. Harrold Carswell to be a member of the Supreme Court.

French Free Daoud; Israelis Furious

PARIS (UPI) — A French court Tuesday freed Palestinian leader Abu Daoud, 39, after rejecting arrest warrants from both France and West Germany. The move brought relations between Paris and Jerusalem to the point of collapse.

Daoud was flown to Algiers and was given a hero's welcome by officials of the Algerian Foreign Ministry and Al Fatah, the largest Palestinian guerrilla group, upon his arrival.

Passengers Get Off Broken Down Ship

MIAMI (UPI) — The cruise liner Monarch Star broke down early Tuesday morning 18 miles off the coast of Cuba and her passengers were picked up by the Monarch Sun later in the day.

As a result of the ship's breakdown, passengers now have the option of remaining aboard the Sun for a 14-day cruise, or being flown back to Miami from Haiti today. If they choose to leave the ship they will receive a refund for the trip.

State Road Deaths Continue Decline

ALBANY (UPI) — Figures released Tuesday by the state Department of Motor Vehicles showed that highway deaths in New York decreased in November 1976 to 189, down from 227 in November 1975.

The toll brought the 11-month count for 1975 to 2,186. That figure also was down from the 1975 level of 2,264, Commissioner James Melton said.

Melton said the number of fatal accidents — those involving one or more deaths — had dropped from 210 in November 1975 to 169 in that month last year.

Water Called Drinkable after Tanker Mishap

Kerosene Spill Won't Hurt Water

By SID LEAVITT
Freeman Staff

PORT EWEN — A 15,000-gallon kerosene spill into the Hudson River near

Albany Tuesday shouldn't have any significant effect on drinking water in Ulster and Dutchess County communities which draw their supplies from the river, officials said.

"I'm not concerned at all," said Harry B. VanOrmer, Town of Esopus water superintendent. The river near Port Ewen is frequently subjected to closer spills without any effect on town water, he said. "We have a lot of oil spills. This is just one you're hearing about," VanOrmer said.

The U.S. Coast Guard in Albany said a 1.8-million-gallon tanker owned by Rheinaur Transportation Corp. of New York lost an estimated 15,000 gallons of kerosene along 15 miles of the river just south of Albany, apparently after hitting an ice floe in the Stuyvesant area.

Although the spill is considered "medium" by federal standards, the N.Y. State Health Department said the kerosene probably would have an "insignificant" effect on river-drawn water systems as far south as Ulster and Dutchess Counties.

Nevertheless, communities along the river south of the spill were asked to check water supplies for possible contamination.

In the Mid-Hudson Valley, communities which draw drinking water from the river are the City of Poughkeepsie and Village of Rhinebeck in Dutchess County and, in Ulster County, the hamlets of Port Ewen in the Town of Esopus and Highland in the Town of Lloyd.

The Coast Guard said ship crewmen first discovered the spill at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in one of the tanker's two 100,000-gallon compartments carrying kerosene. The cracked compartment was repaired after docking near Albany, and about 15,000 gallons had escaped.

Lt Steven A. McCall, Coast Guard executive officer, said the river is routinely traveled by ocean-going vessels which keep the ice open, but a recent period of cold weather has thickened the freeze and has made channel corners hazardous.

Although unworried about the spill, VanOrmer said the town treatment plant has a raw water tap for constant monitoring of the river. Even with kerosene on top, the plant's inlets could continue to draw uncontaminated water because they are 35 feet below the surface.

Emergency measures also include a special activated carbon filtration system and a temporary plant shutdown, if necessary. VanOrmer doubted either measure would be necessary.

The plant has never been closed from (See SPILL, page 5)

No problems are seen at Port Ewen water works.

Former Saugerties Mayor May Be Fined

Gage Sentence Delayed

KINGSTON — Former Saugerties Mayor James V. Gage, charged with tampering with public records while clerk-treasurer of the Village of Saugerties, was sentenced "in a sense" in Ulster County Court this morning.

Judge Raymond Mino indicated that Gage would be fined, but set a hearing date on Jan. 24 at 10 a.m. for the purpose of determining the amount of that fine. Gage had been indicted by an Ulster County Grand Jury in connection with the disappearance of more than $15,000 in village funds. After pleading guilty to the tampering charges, he resigned as mayor.

In his remarks in court today, Judge Mino said, "Part of the sentence will be a fine, to be made at the hearing to determine the defendant's (Gage's) gain from the commission of the offense." The judge also noted the case had received "a great deal of notoriety," that Gage had claimed there was no financial gain to himself, and that District Attorney Francis Vogt had said Gage had gained money.

Noted Judge Mino, "So we have a great controversy," and, when the hearing is held, the court will determine if there was financial gain.

Gage remains free on bail.

Vogt told reporters afterwards that "the fine would be only one part of the sentence," and that it was his understanding that the judge's remarks today did not mean that Gage would get off with "only being fined." 4446 Wednesday, page 1

The probe into Gage's connection with irregularities in the fiscal affairs of the village began in the summer of 1975, shortly after he had been elected mayor in March of that year. The probe had been conducted by the Ulster County District Attorney's office and, reportedly, investigators and auditors had gone back some four years in efforts to track down the missing funds. A state audit of the village's books, kept by Gage during his previous service as village clerk-treasurer, uncovered various discrepancies, including thousands in missing money and unauthorized salary payments.

The investigation never fully determined that the money involved was actually taken or stolen. Gage maintained throughout that grand larceny had not been involved on his part. He said he had simply entered on the books as received and paid tax receipts from local residents who had, in fact, not been able to meet payment.

Gage's insistence in not pleading guilty to grand larceny led to his indictment on the tampering charges, attributed in part to bad bookkeeping.

Gage served as village clerk-treasurer for 10 years under three different mayors, after being appointed to that position in 1964. He resigned as clerk in 1974 to run for mayor, and was elected to that leadership position by a slim 37 votes.

A lifetime resident of Saugerties, Gage was honored with a testimonial banquet in the spring of 1974 when he stepped

Elderly Man Robbed of Savings

PLATTEKILL — Nearly $8,000 in cash was taken from a 79-year-old Plattekill man Tuesday afternoon after he opened his door to three men who threw a blanket over his head and bound him head and foot before seizing the money.

Roy Connell of Route 32 reportedly held on to the cash in the belief that having that much money saved would affect his social security benefits.

Connell lost $5,700 in United States paper currency, $100 in coins and about $50 in Canadian currency.

He opened the door to three white males, one of whom was described as husky. Highland State Police declined to describe the men in any detail.

Social Security Administration Director George Habernig said today that if a person is receiving a social security check monthly, his benefits would not be affected by his savings. If however, he was receiving supplementary income from Social Security, based on need, it would affect his income

Fact Finder Recommends 2-year Contract

UCCC Faculty Pact Proposed

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA
Freeman Staff

ALBANY — A two-year contract, with a $500 across-the-board salary increase retroactive to January 1st, has been recommended for the faculty of Ulster County Community College by a state Public Employment Relations Board fact finder.

James A. Cashen of Clavarrack, PERB fact finder in the current contract dispute between the college and its Faculty Association, yesterday recommended a contract from Sept. 1, 1976 through Aug. 31, 1978. He said the $500 increase should be prorated for the remainder of the contract year based on a 10-month salary payment schedule. He also called for a two per cent wage increase beginning Sept. 1, 1977 and a 3 per cent increase on Jan. 1, 1978.

Cashen noted that, prorated over the remainder of this school year, the pay raise would be little more than $250. But he said the eventual increase would provide a higher base salary for next year. "While such a proposed increase will not keep the employees in pace with cost-of-living increases or with settlements in surrounding community colleges," said Cashen, "it does represent an increased cost to the county at a time when expenditure increases must be kept at a minimum."

Other recommendations by Cashen in an effort to settle the contract dispute include:

• Payment for teaching more than the maximum 30 semester hours ("overload" rate) increased Sept. 1, 1977 by $15 each, and rejection of request for promotion rates increase.

• No change in teaching workload except that both parties should negotiate provision that would recognize substantial driving time by faculty members teaching at off-campus locations more than 15 miles from campus.

• No change in family health insurance plan; rejection of dental plan; increase college's contribution to long-term disability plan from $5,600 to $7,000 per year.

• Continuation of current grievance procedure and sabbatical leave.

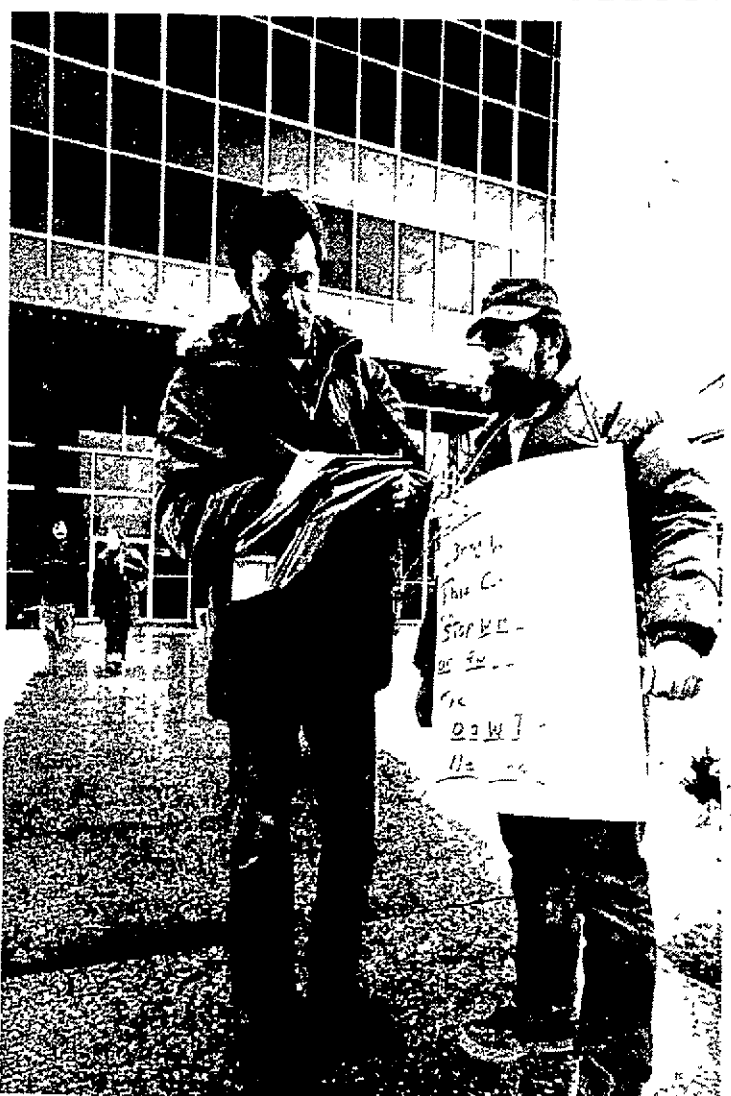

• Increase amount for professional development to $7,000; increase mileage allowance for use of personal car to 14 cents a mile.

• An additional $3,000 for current school year and again for next year for increased stipends for division chairmen and coordinators; rejection of request for reduced workloads for Faculty Association president and other officers; selection of division chairmen to be determined by the administration after consulting with Association representatives.

• Sick leave accumulation raised from 150 to 165 days; qualified faculty to be encouraged to cover colleague's class in event of illness.

• Dean of Faculty to submit recommendations for promotion to president of college rather than a special committee

Petitioner Counters Anti-arterial Claims

KINGSTON — WHITA's opposition to the proposed arterial highway in downtown Kingston is not supported by all the taxpayers in Ulster County and a Kingston man says he has 1,500 signatures to prove it.

Bradley Wilson, a construction worker who has been unemployed for 15 months, says he garnered the signatures in just three days on a petition in favor of the construction of the arterial. Bradley says he solicited the signatures in front of the local unemployment office. Yesterday he took his cause to the front of the Ulster County Office Building.

"People here have jobs and they're not as eager to sign as the unemployed are," said Bradley, "but even still, we're getting a good response."

As he spoke, his wife stood nearby and asked people to sign. The two of them have formed the Out of Work Taxpayers Association of Ulster County, a new group in support of the arterial. Bradley says he plans to get in touch with many of the signers and make the group a viable organization.

"I've got signatures from people who are losing their homes because they are in the path of the arterial, but they understand what it means to get jobs in this area. I've got even more signatures from people who are losing their home because they can't pay their taxes. We need work, and work will bring money into the area."

Last week WHITA and an ad hoc citizens committee known as CCTI learned that their attempt to force another public hearing on the arterial has been denied. The groups are planning additional action on the matter, claiming that the 2.4 mile roadway is unnecessary, costly and a burden on the taxpayers.

"There won't be any taxpayers if we don't get some work in this town," said Bradley.

Rough Referendum Road Blocks Arterial Foes

By ROB BORSELLINO
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — Avenues to a referendum on the $35 million arterial through downtown Kingston may be closing fast, according to WHITA President Mary Mc Mickle.

The taxpayer group, which opposes the roadway, has been trying to force the matter onto the ballot for a vote, but they've learned a mandatory referendum is not applicable and an advisory referendum is not probable. The Kingston Common Council, the group which would have to give the go ahead on an advisory referendum, has supported the arterial and they're not expected to honor the referendum request.

"Maybe we're wrong in thinking that the people of Kingston don't want the arterial," said Ms. McMickle, "but if we are wrong, I'd like to have some proof I can't understand why the Common Council isn't willing to listen to the people."

Ms. McMickle said that recent opposition to the roadway has come from Broadway businessmen who feel the bypass will ruin their businesses and from the local Conservative party, whose members are concerned with the cost of the project.

"With all the support we've been getting it's kind of discouraging that we're being ignored," said Ms. McMickle.

She said her group feels that Kingston Mayor Frank Koenig and the Common Council are beginning to view the $35 million roadway as a monument to their administration.

WHITA and others who are opposed to the arterial plan to attend the February 1st meeting of the Common Council and attempt to address the

DPW in Quandary Over Icy Roads

KINGSTON — With long-time city residents claiming that the streets and sidewalks of Kingston are in "the worst condition we've ever seen," the city's Department of Public Works (DPW) is claiming that it's doing the best it can. "It's too cold for the salt to have much effect," said DPW Administrator Woodrow Diehl. "The salt just melts a hole in the ice without breaking it up."

Diehl said the DPW is considering an "old fashioned sanding job," something which will undoubtedly cause clogs in the sewer system come spring.

On the question of the sidewalks, Diehl notes that that is a problem that should be dealt with by the individual homeowners. He says that neither the DPW nor the city police have the manpower to crack down on violators.

"The city charter says that we should clean the sidewalks, and then bill the property owner, which we did last year, but we had a hard time collecting. Up until a few years ago this was never a problem because people took care of their walks. I don't know why people feel they no longer have to take care of their places," said Diehl.

Ski Split for KHS

WOODRIDGE — Kingston High's ski team travelled to Fallsburgh Tuesday and came away from the races with a split. The KHS girls zipped to tight, 171.65 to 172.25 triumph over their Comet counterparts, but the Tiger boys fell, 132.75 to 146.95.

The Dill family is the heart of the Fallsburgh squad. Peter Dill led his teammates to their win, and sister Cathy streaked to a first in the girls' division with a 30.30 clocking.

Debbie Cohen broke up Fallsburgh's scoring by grabbing a second in 32.0, then the Tigers nailed down the fifth through the eighth positions to notch their win by a margin under a second.

In the boys' race, two of the top five KHS racers, took spills. "That would have made it closer, but Fallsburgh's team is still superior," said KHS coach Tony Badalato.

Dill was timed in 25.15 to lead a Comet sweep of the top three places. Dan Ingalsbe was the first Tiger home in 27.40 for fourth place.

The results:

TRIM'S ARENA

Sawyer Matmen Fall

HYDE PARK — Saugerties High's wrestling team came up just one point short of host Roosevelt Tuesday in a DCSL dual meet, but that final, 28-27 count came only because Lars Haug and Rich Ryan scored falls for the Sawyers in the last two bouts of the day.

"They outthusted us," said Saugerties coach Hank Smith, a little chagrined at the outcome. "We've always had a shakin' team since I've been here, but I must be doing something wrong. These kids just didn't have any shake."

A few unexpected defeats put the match out of reach by the time Haug stopped Phil Giampontone in 3:45 of the 179-pound battle. Mike Kerbert didn't expect to lose a 4-3 decision to Don Hamilton in 128; Tom Francello didn't expect to lose either, especially by a superior decision to Joe King in 140.

Saugerties, 2-3 thus far, is at John Jay Friday.

Saugerties Beats Beacon

KHS Girls Snap Lourdes Jinx

POUGHKEEPSIE — It was a long time coming, but it finally came to pass Tuesday as the Kingston High School girls varsity basketball team defeated Our Lady of Lourdes, 57-45, for the first time since entering the Dutchess County Scholastic League in 1971-72.

"It was quite a ball game," said an elated Kingston coach Pat Burke. "Needless to say, we have a lot of happy girls."

It was not all that glamorous. Kingston had to earn its way with hard work and pounding hearts. With 3:50 remaining in the game, the Tigers were only ahead by two points (45-43) after having trailed throughout the entire first half.

"Lynette Byrd stole the ball for a lay-up and then we just went on a scoring binge," described Burke. "I think we must have stolen the ball seven times in a row after that. Lourdes just couldn't get the ball up the court."

The Tigers had a difficult first half, as Lourdes viciously outbounced them. Burke inserted four guards and "one big girl" to correct the situation and things began to improve rapidly. Going into the final quarter, Kingston surged ahead 37-33 and never surrendered the lead, as it put together a 20 point fourth quarter, while holding Lourdes to 12.

Kingston's Ertha Burris was well ahead of the field, scoring 26 points on 12 field goals and two free throws. Lynette Byrd was her closest pursuer with 14 points, and both girls shared the distinction of having the most steals (7). Byrd also leaped for 11 rebounds, tying Lori Eaton for team honors.

For Lourdes, it was Donna Way, Maryanne McKeon and Trish Anderson all with seven points.

In another DCSL contest, Saugerties rocked Beacon, 75-34. The Sawyers held the Bulldogs to a 15 point first half, while exploding for 42. Saugerties was able to maintain the distance throughout the second half and march to the decisive outcome.

Three Sawyers turned in "double figure performances," as Shelly Pfeil hit for 26, Peggy Hain scored 14, and Micki Stilphen added 16.

Saugerties and Lourdes, both with one loss, share the number four spot behind Kingston and Roosevelt, (3-0), and Poughkeepsie (2-0) with 1-1 records.

The Sawyers will take to the road on Friday as they will meet Arlington, while Kingston will be at home on Thursday, to take on John Jay.

Kuhn Takes The Stand

CHICAGO (UPI) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will testify today in his own defense in the final act of Charles O. Finley's $3.5 million damage suit against major league baseball.

Kuhn will be the last witness for the defense and his testimony is expected to cover at least one full day and perhaps part of Thursday since Finley's counsel, Neil Pappano, has indicated he grill the commissioner extensively.

Finley's suit charges that Kuhn not only exceeded his authority but acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner last June in voiding Finley's sale of Joe Rudi, Rolie Fingers and Vida Blue to the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees for a total of $3.5 million.

Kuhn's witnesses, including four members of baseball's executive council, have testified repeatedly that the commissioner's power was all encompassing. However, some of them testified they advised Kuhn to let the sales stand.

Walter O'Malley, owner of the Los Angeles Dodgers and a member of the council, testified Wednesday that he "would have done precisely what he (Kuhn) did, actually." The amount of money as well as the fact that Finley was "breaking up a championship team during the season and selling players to make it easier for another club to win it" also were factors in his thinking, O'Malley said.

O'Malley described a conference call between Kuhn and the executive council after Finley's sale had been announced and said that both National League President Chub Feeney and American League President Lee MacPhail "felt the commissioner should not disturb it (the sale)."

Red Hook Tops KHS Gymnasts

RED HOOK — The Red Hook varsity girls gymnastics team, posting victories in three out of four events, handed Kingston its second loss of the season by a score of 61.3-39.9.

Kingston's Barb Shaw provided the only first place finish for her team, winning the uneven parallel bars competition with a total of 5.5 points. Karen McCullough captured second in the balance beam with a 4.4 behind Red Hook's Laurie Miller, who posted a 4.6.

In the floor exercise, Mary Fraioli of Red Hook was first with a 7.8 as teammate Lisa Poleschner finished second (6.1) and Sue Semilot of Kingston placed third with a 5.5.

Red Hook also captured first in the vaulting as Theresa Fraioli scored a 7.1. Kingston's Mary Murphy was third at 5.0.

Out with the Ivy, In with the Jeans

By MARIAN CHRISTY

"Even a president has to come off his pedestal, take a shower and slip into casual clothes," says Norman Karr, director of the powerful New York-based Men's Fashion Association.

The man on Karr's lips:

President-elect Jimmy Carter, 52, who'll go to his inauguration as 39th president of the United States in a business suit rather than a tuxedo, the freckled-faced Georgia peanut farmer who is a jeans enthusiast, who hit the campaign trail in blazer suits, shirts and cardigans and aviator jackets and boots made for stomping.

The Men's Fashion Association, which traditionally looks to the president to set America's dress code, isn't frowning upon Carter's unorthodox fashion tastes. But Karr admits that Washington will never be the same once Carter and clan take over the capital.

"Carter is destroying the concept that the president is not a reachable, touchable man," says Karr. "He was elected by the people and his manner of dress indicates that he's one of the people. Also, he's allowing the world a very intimate, very human view of himself."

However, not everyone in the men's fashion industry sees the Carter fashion image as positive.

Among the Carter critics is New York-based designer Dimitri of Italy, a recent Coty Award winner and a man who dresses celebrities and millionaires with $500-and-up suits.

"Carter is not spectacular-looking," snorts Dimitri. "He's certainly not a man who cares about clothes. But then, his political philosophy is that he doesn't want to be different than the mass. As a result, he doesn't stand out. He melts into the crowd."

Dimitri disapproves of the fact that Carter, who is said to sometimes look like an "old adolescent," wears denim jeans with a matching aviator's jacket. "Blue jean outfits don't become a president," says Dimitri tartly. "He could look fabulous. But he wants to look young. Only he's not so young anymore."

Up to now, Carter has been buying off-the-rack suits from Kinnebrew's in Americus, Ga. The suits, in the $150-$200 range, are manufactured by either Sewell Co. or Warren Sewell Co. — two separate Georgia firms operated by two segments of one family.

"Carter's clothes don't look expensive," sighs Leon Block of New York's Dunhill Tailored Clothes, a shop that custom-makes suits for celebrities like Cary Grant and the Kennedy clan.

"The president-elect needs clothes that are well cut," advises Block. "And he should not look so typically American. He needs suits that are acceptable in Rome, Paris, London or New York. He should get a wardrobe of well, cosmopolitan clothes."

Menswear designer John Weitz, whose American-made clothes are featured in Japan and Europe, predicts that Carter's so-called "down home" fashion image marks the beginning of the end of the East Coast Establishment look.

"The days of Choate and Harvard, Yale and Princeton are fading," prophesies Weitz. "The impetus and focus is away from the button-down Ivy League way of dressing to the casual Midwest look. Carter's choice of clothes symbolizes the great shift of power."

Weitz says he's "delighted" that the "new elite" moving into the Washington scene is not "the racquet club elite."

"Carter's clothes are a reflection of a new attitude," says Weitz. "Carter has been photographed wearing a navy blazer and gray trousers. In the near future, many bank presidents will be going to important board meetings dressed in blazer suits. The influential president-elect has relaxed the business of dressing."

The consensus among major menswear fashion authorities is that Jimmy Carter is making the fashion statement that he is of the people, for the people, by the people. The fashion industry, which is taking note, is split in its opinions of Carter's continuing identification with the masses.

Norman Kerr: "His image is honest. Why should a president always look as if he's about to deliver a State of the Union speech?"

Dimitri: "A president sets an example — even in fashion. At the moment, he (Mr. Carter) doesn't have an elegant image."

Renovation Project Set at Erpf Center

ARKVILLE—A fairly extensive renovation project designed to make the Erpf Center more accessible and attractive for community use is underway on the second floor of the building. Under the guidance of Seager Fairbairn, renovation will include better display space for the collection of old tools, areas for workshops and drop in programs as well as more formal instruction in both practical use of tools and wood, and instruction or demonstration of old tools and techniques.

Those interested in working in this new space or with suggestions for courses should contact the center.

Homemaker Service Fills Local Needs

KINGSTON—Home is where the heart is. But one of the most heartbreaking aspects of sickness and old age is the necessity for leaving home and going to a hospital or nursing home.

Today, however, many families are avoiding this painful step, thanks to a growing number of qualified people who are homemaker-home health aides.

Most Americans no longer live in extended family groups. And, when sickness strikes or old age becomes a burden, there is frequently no one to step in and help. Soaring medical costs and crowded—and frequently inadequate—health care facilities have compounded the problem.

Helping to fill the need is the Homemaker Service at 44 Main St., Kingston, one of thousands of community-based homemaker-home health aide services around the country which provide trained and professionally supervised people to help families in their own homes in time of stress. These services are frequently credited with preventing the breakup of families, the uprooting of children and the necessity for moving chronically ill, disabled and aging people into institutions.

The mother who has no one to care for her young children while she is hospitalized; the parents with a handicapped child who are finding it difficult to meet both the child's needs and those of their other children; the elderly person who cannot function at home without some assistance—these are some of the people who are calling on the local homemaker-home health aide service program.

Homemaker-home health aides are mature people who are trained in child care, personal care of the sick, handicapped and disabled, and who are experienced in home management. They are not nurses, domestics or babysitters—but they DO work in the home performing a variety of jobs that must be done, under the supervision of a social worker or registered nurse.

Often they perform household tasks such as light cleaning, laundry, shopping and meal preparing. They may be needed to bathe a patient and help with prescribed exercises and preparation of special diets. They will report a significant change in a patient's condition to a professional assigned to the case. And they will encourage a patient to become as self-reliant as possible.

The National Council for Homemaker-Home Health

Aide Services, the non-profit organization which monitors the standards of such agencies, points out that not only is at-home care usually less stressful to those involved but

Low in calories, high in vitamin C

By Louise K. Breitung

The origin of grapefruit is not fully known, but the fruit is thought to be a mutation or variant of the shaddock or pummelo, an earlier member of the citrus family, because of their similarity in appearance. They are believed to have come from one of the West Indies—perhaps Barbados or Jamaica. Compared with the shaddock, grapefruit are smaller in size, have a thinner rind, more tender pulp, and are sweeter and less bitter. Grapefruit are borne in clusters on the tree in contrast to shaddocks, which are borne singly.

....Grapefruit

The name, grapefruit, originated during the 18th century in the West Indies and was given to the smaller shaddock because of its resemblance to the grape in flavor and in the way it grew in clusters.

The grapefruit industry in the United States owes its beginning to the Spanish nobleman, Don Philippe, who in 1809 brought the seed of the grapefruit to Safety Harbor in Pinellas County, Florida. Production of grapefruit as a commercial crop in our country was surprisingly long delayed until about 1880. First shipments of grapefruit from Florida to New York and Philadelphia were sent between 1880 and 1885. Development of new and better grapefruit varieties stimulated the expansion of the grapefruit industry. Many of the varieties now cultivated originated in Florida. Duncan was one of the earliest varieties propagated, but varieties with fewer seeds have superseded it. The Marsh (seedless) grapefruit originated in Lakeland, Florida more than 70 years ago. Today the Marsh grapefruit is recognized as one of the best varieties, probably because of its nearly seedless character, and is more extensively planted than any other variety. Foster (seeded), the first pink grapefruit, originated in the early 1900's as a bud mutation. The first pink seedless grapefruit, Thompson, was discovered in 1913, as a bud variant on a Marsh tree. Cultivation of the pink-fleshed varieties has expanded rapidly in Texas. These varieties are also grown extensively in Florida. While the grapefruit industry in this country originated and was largely developed in Florida, other growing areas include Texas, California and Arizona.

Fresh grapefruit consumption was found in 1965 to be related to incomes of families. A study in that year showed that a larger proportion of high income families served fresh grapefruit than did low income families. Moreover, the high income families ate considerably more fresh grapefruit per household than did low income families. High income families used only a little more canned grapefruit juice than did low income families.

Shoppers can tell certain varieties of pink grapefruit by the color of the rind—some show a pink or red blush. But other varieties need to be identified by the marketer. Production of pink varieties is growing in importance. Pink grapefruit are sold mostly for fresh use, whereas white are sold for both fresh use and for processing. Prices for seedless pink grapefruit tend to average above seedless white grapefruit. But when production of the pink varieties is up sharply in any one season, the reverse may be true. Grapefruit are selling in a large retail store with many outlets in Ulster County at $1.09 for a 5 lb. bag of pink seedless and 99 cents per 5 lb. bag for white seedless.

Leading varieties include: Marsh, the most important seedless variety. Size varies; skin is thin with light yellow color; flesh is white, juicy and tart. The marketing season is from October through June.

Thompson, sometimes called Pink Marsh. Similar to the Marsh except the flesh is pink. Marketing season is from January to May.

Ruby, similar to the Thompson. This variety has a deep pink blush on the skin and deep pink to red flesh that is slightly tart. Marketing season is November to June.

Duncan, most widely grown of the seeded type. Size varies; flesh is white. Has excellent flavor, considered by many to be superior to other varieties. Marketing season is from October to June.

Foster, similar to Duncan with pink flesh.

Burgundy, a large size fruit with a distinct, red blush on the skin. Flesh and juice are deep pink and quite sweet. Has few seeds. Marketing season is from November to May.

Heavy for their size.

Firm, but springy to the touch.

Well-shaped with fairly smooth skin.

Heavy, relatively smooth fruits usually have a thin skin and are juicy. Fruits that are somewhat pointed at the stem end are apt to be thick-skinned (particularly if the skin is very rough, ridged, or wrinkled), and less juicy. Surface defects, such as scale, scars, thorn scratches, and discoloration are minor and affect appearance, not eating quality. Some fruit have a reddish-yellow or reddish-brown overcast of the background yellow skin color, known as russetting. Russetting has no effect on flavor of the fruit.

Avoid fruit with decay that appears as a soft, discolored area at the stem end or as a water-soaked area where little of the yellow color remains and the skin breaks easily.

Store fresh grapefruit in the refrigerator until used. Like all citrus fruit, keep the fruit dry and spread out one layer deep to minimize bruising and to prevent the development of decay.

Food Value—Grapefruit, like all other citrus fruit, rank high as a source of Vitamin C. One-half of a medium size grapefruit furnishes two-thirds of the Vitamin C recommended for the daily diet of a normally active man.

Grapefruit is low in calories. Half a medium size grapefruit or a half-cup serving of unsweetened fresh, canned or frozen juice furnishes just 50 calories.

Local Girl Goes to Top With Ecology Complaint

Rosa Mercado

KINGSTON—Ten-year-old Rosa Mercado was studying ecology with her class at the George Washington School, and became horrified by the fact that certain animals are becoming extinct due to the carelessness of hunters and the lack of stringent regulations. Rosa, the daughter of Juan and Marion Mercado of Rosendale Road, Kingston, decided to take her ecological complaints right to the top. Despite her brother's teasing, Rosa composed a letter to President-elect Carter asking him to act as soon as possible to save the wolves in Alaska. The conscientious girl then borrowed 13-cents from her mother to mail the letter.

On Monday, Rosa received an autographed photo of Jimmy Carter with a personal reply promising to do all he could to preserve this country's wildlife.

Being a lover of animals, Rosa couldn't be more delighted with Carter's letter, and the president-elect has certainly acquired a very staunch, though young, supporter.

Art and Craft Workshops

KINGSTON—Once again the Art Department of the Kingston Schools Consolidated is offering art and craft workshops for parents, community group leaders and school personnel. The workshops are being offered to the community as an opportunity to learn, explore, and experience various arts and crafts techniques following numerous requests that the department sponsor additional workshops.

March, 30; Drawing and Painting, April 27. Class hours are 6:30 to 10:30 p.m.

Workshops will be held at the George Washington School cafeteria. Enrollment will be limited and based on a first-come-first served basis.

It also is less costly, both to the individual and the taxpayer, than care in an institution. Fees vary according to circumstances but are generally based on ability to pay.

Because those who need these services are often vulnerable—both emotionally and physically—it is imperative that those helping them do so in accord with basic national standards. The most important of these standards calls for pre-service and on-the-job training of homemaker-home health aides, professional supervision and the services of a professional person who is competent to assess individual and family needs for service and health care.

"We simply weren't needed as much when there were extended family groups to care for and protect their own ill or vulnerable family members," says Florence Moore, national executive director, "but today services such as ours are desperately needed. They must be provided in ways which safeguard those who need them."

Echoing her sentiments is a 78-year-old New York City widow who says of her homemaker-home health aide: "Before she came...I was crawling around, just waiting for neighbors and relatives to come. I can't do housework so, she does that and prepares some of my meals. She's also very good company, kind and good and compassionate. I get depressed a lot, but she always cheers me up."

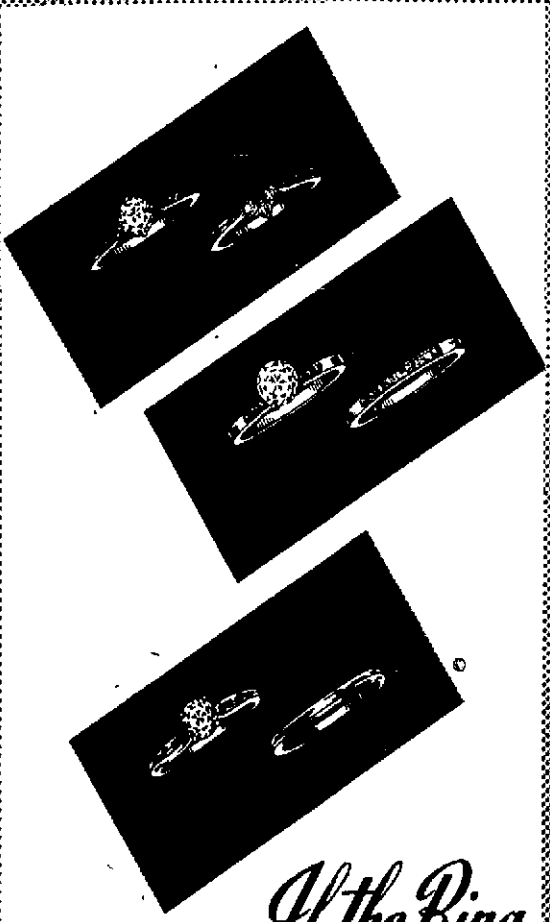

The Homemaker Service in Kingston, directed by Mrs. Rosemarie Arceri, is open daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Information about services is available by mail or phone.

UCCC Nursing Grads—DEAR ABBY

Elaine Davenport lights candle for Gail Miller and Rita Ayers at the graduation ceremonies for the Ulster County Community College class of nursing students at the municipal auditorium, Kingston, Friday, Jan. 7. The class of 24 completed requirements for the association in Applied Science degree in Nursing. Vincent Moravaro was the lone male student in the group. All will be eligible for the New York State exams for registered nurse status to be conducted Feb. 2 and 3.

Are Girls 'Asking for Rape?'

DEAR ABBY: It's no wonder so many girls and women are raped these days. They go around without bras, wearing halters and skin-tight pants, and some of them even leave their whole midsections bare naked. They practically ask for it!

I'm not saying we should be easy on the rapists who commit these terrible crimes, but the way some girls dress I can understand how a man can be tempted beyond his ability to control himself.—GRANDMA: GARDEN CITY, N.Y.

DEAR GRANDMA: The theory that girls "ask for it" by the way they dress is not valid. What's so tempting about a 10-month-old baby wearing a diaper? Or an 85-year-old woman in a housedress?

Rapists are more interested in humiliating and degrading a female than in satisfying themselves sexually. Any female (of any age) will do.

One piece of advice to women on how to dress to protect themselves against rape: Wear shoes you can RUN in.

DEAR ABBY: The continuing discussion in your column regarding "recycled dentures" brought to mind an old limerick which you may have heard:

"There was an old man of Tarentum
Who gnashed his false teeth
Till he bent 'em.
When they asked him the cost
Of what he had lost,
He replied, 'I can't say, for I rent 'em.'"

My research reveals that 70 years ago, British weekly newspapers carried this advertisement: "Old artificial teeth bought. If forwarded by post, utmost value per return or offer made."

So you see, Abby, what happens to old dentures has intrigued people for a long, long time.—M. E. RING, D. D. S.

DEAR M. E.: Thanks to the editor of the Bulletin of the History of Dentistry. DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter recently from a former G.I. who said he's yet to see an Army Chaplain who would help a G.I. marry a girl who wasn't round-eyed, Anglo-Saxon and Christian. I agree with you; that was an unfair knock to chaplains. But we're hardly a "melting pot" in this country yet, either.

Years ago, I was in love with a wonderful girl I'll call "Rosita." We worked and saved—even picked prunes together. We had a few acres and a shack picked out. I put a tractor together from salvage parts, and we went shopping for used furniture. God knows how much I loved that little dark-haired girl!

But she was Catholic and I, Protestant. She, Italian and I, English. After a struggle with parents, preacher and priest, they finally said they could overlook the difference in nationality, but religion—NO! Each side insisted it had to be their church all the way. Nobody would give in, so we had to say goodbye. Now I see how foolish we were.

Religious freedom? What a joke. Were I to do it again, I'd tell the whole bunch to go fly a kite. A man has only one love like this in a lifetime.—BLEW MY CHANCE

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Cruise Line then decided to have the Sun adopt the Star's route. The Sun's passengers were given the option of getting an extra week of cruising free to Caracas, Aruba, Curacao, La Guaira, Granada, Martinique, St. Martin and St. Thomas or of flying back to Miami and receiving a full refund for the trip.

The Star's passengers, who were originally scheduled for the longer trip, were offered a flight back with a refund or the rest of the cruise plus a $100 credit at the ship's bars and shops.

A spokesman for the line said the cruise ship would not be overcrowded despite the fact that the additional passengers will bring it over its listed passenger capacity. "We have carried that many in the past. There is adequate food aboard and they will all be comfortable," he said.

The Coast Guard said the seagoing tugboat Curb from Key West was headed for the 617-foot Star to tow the liner back to the port of Miami for repairs. In addition, a Chalko Airline plane was to fly engine parts to the Star today, receiving permission from the State Department Tuesday to fly inside what Cuba claims as its air space.

Inventors Have Entitled It 'Advice'

New British Game Is Said to 'Democratize' Chess

LONDON (UPI) — Alick Elithorn has advice for fed-up citizens who've always wanted to talk back to their lawyers, priests and psychiatrists.

His advice? "Advice" — a new board game that "sort of democratizes chess and reduces its complexities."

Two players are needed for Elithorn's game — manipulating their "citizens" across the board with the aid of "priests," "lawyers" and "psychiatrists."

Elithorn, 55, is a London medical psychologist who is a consultant for the Royal Free Hospital and Institute of Neurology. He said his game evolved over a period of three or four years using computers to study board game strategy.

"I was looking for a game that had the same qualities of chess but didn't have the disadvantages — length and difficulty of rules," he said.

"If you don't know the opening rules of chess that have been worked out over centuries, you can't even get into the middle game," he said.

In addition to being an offshoot of chess — a strategy game — "Advice" is a race game. And it can be adapted to different skill levels by playing variations — "commune," "dictator," "slaughter" and "mayhem."

A player wins "Advice" by being the first to move his "citizen" across the board into his goal square, or by capturing his opponent's "citizen."

His professional team does the work for him by advancing and attacking in Chinese-checker-like chain jump moves.

"Captures" are made by jumping an opponent's piece according to a set hierarchy. "Priests" capture "lawyers," "lawyers" capture "psychiatrists" and "psychiatrists" capture "priests."

Elithorn has researched gaming and its use in diagnosing and treating nervous disorders since he was a medical student. He said he wove elements of social conflict into "Advice" because he thinks "games are a sort of microcosm. It's the nearest you can get to a real-life situation."

Although his gaming theories are in use at several medical centers in the United States, Sweden and New Zealand, Elithorn admitted that his techniques haven't been well received in Britain.

"And likewise, I'm putting myself out on a limb professionally with this game — because it's not really considered a very gentlemanly thing to do," Elithorn said.

But he and his wife Sheila, a major partner in the "Advice" enterprise, insist the last year of polishing, producing and marketing the game has been worth it. They speak proudly of their first customers — who include the Harvard COOP and Hamley's — London's leading toy store.

Elithorn and his wife played the game for several years before they judged it ready to go on the market.

"I like to think he thought of it and I improved it," Mrs. Elithorn said.

The Elithorns said they've been pleased by reaction to "Advice."

Hamley's featured the game in a magazine spread on its Christmas toys and it was favorably reviewed in the Law Society Gazette.

"But what pleases us the most is the people who've bought 'Advice' and come back and say they want one for their friends," Mrs. Elithorn said.

Marketing "Advice" posed a major problem for the Elithorns early on in the game — where do you put thousands of game boards, boxes and playing pieces?

They solved the problem by moving to the suburbs and opening a game shop in Kenilworth Town. "Advice," chess sets and most major board and bookshelf box games comprise their stock.

"I've always had some slight fantasy of being a shopkeeper," Elithorn said. "But basically the shop evolved because we wanted to market the game."

Producing "Advice" has involved a considerable investment for the Elithorns — who admit that even if the game proves to be a success, they can't hope to break even before Christmas 1977.

"And at best it's not going to be the same sort of money-maker as 'Monopoly,'" Elithorn said. "I see it as a constant buffer against inflation for my family."

But they said they decided to market the game themselves rather than sell it to a manufacturer because "we thought we'd lose control of it and not be able to do it our way if we went through a company," Elithorn said.

"We're really being somewhat ambitious," he admits. "The game market is rather crowded."

But Elithorn's ambition doesn't stop with "Advice." What does he plan to do after he gets it off the ground?

"Then, on to the next game," he said, smiling.

Elithorn said. "The game market is rather crowded."

 Q. How did your pharmacist get behind that prescription counter?
 A. It wasn't easy. To qualify for a license, a pharmacist must complete a five year college course, studying biochemistry, physical and analytical chemistry, drug interactions, bacteriology, pharmacology, toxicology, and compounding. Pharmacists must also serve an internship. And their education doesn't stop there. In order to keep up with the latest developments, your pharmacist is involved in continuing education programs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeanne Dixon

THURSDAY, JAN. 13
Your birthday today: Adjustment to things as they are comes first. Next a surge of idealism plus an urge to improve your personal world sets in for an active, generally successful year. This is a time to translate past experience into wisdom through meditation. Relationships lead to many incidents you wouldn't plan. Today's natives are militant, bluntly candid. Those born this year will be smoother, plan a long series of intermediate phases to get where they are going.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Pressure, interference factors decrease; life returns to normal. Review your financial status, make minor readjustments as indicated by competent advisors.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Talks are circuitous, involve people who aren't part of the basic situation, but do relieve many problems. Take legal action only on professional counsel.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Special opportunities are at hand if you've gotten through this week's endless squabbles unscathed. Apply for privileges, pay raises, new jobs where appropriate.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Where you move on sudden impulse or obey somebody's whim, the one area that needs exceptional care is money. Older folk's concerns are your responsibility.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Make sure home, workplace are free of hazard. Leave unfamiliar repairs to technicians. Go it alone on things you know. Put in overtime if adequately paid.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Check important deals with experienced people, leave nothing to chance. Don't trust unmotivated friends with any of the action or promise any rewards to come.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Serious effort to persuade VIPs to help is in order. Advice lacks understanding of your position; forget it. Let go the past to improve emotional climate.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Budgets suffer as you respond to an urge to indulge in a moment of luxury. Find a balance between work and pleasure. Romantic invitations are likely.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: You get more done by not being on the spot to take all the credit and blame. Keep your ears open, learn others' intentions, keys to handling them.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Propriety keeps you on honesty's straight and narrow path. Confronting wastes money, engenders conflict. Be thrifty; solid planning takes cash.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Not all nearby are dependable. On crucial items deal with those who proved reliable long ago. In seeking truth, unsuspected facts come to light.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Well-intentioned friends are meddlers, more hindrance than real assistance. Listen to their palaver, then do as you please. Emotional ties deepen.

TEEN FORUM

By JEAN ADAMS, Ph.D.

SIX MONTHS: (Q.) A long time ago, this boy Mark and I had a disagreement. It wasn't a fight — it was because I wouldn't French kiss him. Well, it's been six months, and he still won't talk to me. I really want to be friends and I don't think that was any reason for him to turn against me. I just wasn't ready.

I don't know whether I love him or not, because it's been so long. But I still care very much.

It puzzles me a lot. This is the first time I've ever felt this way about a boy. Do you think it is love on my part? Should I wait awhile longer to see if things improve? — Wondering in Alabama.

(A.) You were fair with Mark. You told him what you would not do. He was not fair with you. He did not accept your right to have your own opinions and standards.

He dropped you. He has given no sign that he has changed. If you went back to him now it would be on his own terms — you doing what he wanted you to do. He may be waiting for you to come back, but I don't think you should.

Look for a more reasonable boy.

TURNED DOWN: (Q.) I have been trying to ask a girl out for almost a year now. But no matter who the girl is, I am always turned down.

I spend an hour talking with a girl. Then when I ask her for a date, she says, "No, but thanks for asking me, anyhow."

Please tell me what I can do to get a girl to accept. I am bored sitting doing nothing. I am 18 and in college. — Lonely in Pennsylvania.

(A.) If you ask enough girls, you will eventually get a date. You might get one sooner if you wouldn't talk so long before asking. An hour is a long time to listen unless one is in love.

The day I graduated from grade school my favorite uncle told me how to conduct my life. "Don't waste your time losing," he said. "Just concentrate on winning." Remember this advice when you take a finesse.

HOW TO TELL
How does South know which black king will be in favorable position? My uncle told me that too. If the club play works, South no longer needs the spade finesse. If the club play loses, South will still be in position to take the spade finesse.

What if both black kings are "wrong"? That's your problem, my uncle told me. "Don't expect too much from an uncle."

Some Call Supreme Court Action Discriminatory

Reaction Mixed on Zoning Rule

WASHINGTON(UPI) — The Supreme Court's ruling that zoning laws are not unconstitutional simply because they happen to make it difficult for low income blacks to live in the suburbs got a mixed reception today, with some attorneys calling it a shield for subtle discrimination.

But the lawyer representing Arlington Heights, Ill., whose zoning ordinances were upheld by the court Tuesday, said the justices were only restating traditional law: that zoning is acceptable unless it is a tool for race discrimination.

None of the eight justices disagreed with Justice Lewis F. Powell's reasoning that an intent to discriminate through zoning must be shown before ordinances can be struck down for violating the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

Three justices dissented from portions of the opinion dealing with a side issue. Powell said the impact of a comprehensive community plan is a factor to be considered in determining segregative intent, but usually cannot be the sole criteria for proving discrimination. More evidence must be introduced.

Although Arlington Heights had only 27 blacks out of 64,000 residents in 1970, the court said there was no evidence the community failed to rezone property for low cost, multifamily dwellings in fear blacks would move in. Rather, the plan was supported by concerns for maintaining a planned community.

Erica Pascal, a lawyer and editor of Land Use Law and Zoning Digest who was involved in the Arlington Heights case, suggested that the justices were ignoring modern-day realities of race relations.

"Mayors and zoning commissioners are not so stupid as to say they want to keep out blacks," she said. "Instead, they talk about the comprehensive plan and maintaining community character and use that as a shield for segregation. Those are valid reasons for zoning, but not when they have a discriminatory impact."

Chicago attorney Jack M.

Siegel, who represented Arlington Heights, said his opponents ignored reality by suggesting the Chicago suburb's residents were bigoted.

"To call someone a bigot just because you lost is unreasonable. Good zoning doesn't necessarily become bad just because it excludes some blacks with low incomes," Siegel said.

He said the decision did not lay down significant new law. "It just says you can come but that if you zone to discriminate it's unconstitutional ... Every case will depend on its facts." Siegel said he had known the Arlington Heights city fathers for years and "they aren't just a bunch of bigots. I was personally satisfied from the very beginning no bigotry was involved."

Ford's Final Address on TV Tonight

WASHINGTON(UPI) — President Ford gives his final State of the Union speech tonight and aides said he would use the nationally televised farewell address to reaffirm his "faith in the American people and in American institutions."

But barring last-minute changes, they said, he will not outline any major new proposals or deal at length with two of the most controversial issues still before him — decontrol of gasoline prices and amnesty for Vietnam-era draft evaders and deserters.

Ford was to deliver the speech at 9 p.m. EST before a joint session of Congress.

It was almost sure to be his last presidential appearance in the House where he served a generation, and a last chance for him to express his views nationally before turning power over to Jimmy Carter next week.

The speech was expected to run about 45 minutes, take in a wide range of top domestic and foreign policy issues, and play up his administration's primary accomplishments.

WEATHER

A butane torch used to thaw water pipes was blamed for a fire that caused heat and smoke damage to the Thomas J. Murphy home on Churchland Road in Centerville Tuesday. Murphy told authorities he was trying to thaw frozen pipes in the cellar when the floor overheated, catching fire and spreading to wall partitions. Members of the Centerville and Cedar Grove Fire Companies responded to a 9 a.m. call and had the fire under control within a half hour. There were no personal injuries reported.

Suit Total Has Reached $765,000

Saugerties Schools Sued Heavily

SAUGERTIES — Negligence actions against the Saugerties Central Schools are running at an all-time high, with lawsuits totaling $765,000 already brought against the district and notice given that yet another claim has been filed.

Attorney Louis Francello told the Board of Education Tuesday night that a $265,000 suit has been filed by local resident, William Robb. The suit is a result of the alleged negligence on the part of a bus driver discharging Robb's daughter, who was struck by a car as she crossed the road.

The Robb suit follows in the wake of a recent $500,000 suit against the district brought by Sharon Lee Stiel. Mrs. Stiel's claim centers on her son and his possible permanent loss of motion and arm use, stemming from a fall from monkey bars on a school playground.

The board voted on Francello's recommendation, to deny both claims and refer them to the insurance company. But Francello also said he would have recommendations later on a third claim brought by James Karanza. He did not indicate the reason for that suit or the amount of damages being sought. But he did say, with more interest than chagrin, "I never saw so many negligence actions as I've seen this year."

If lawsuits currently plague the local school district, so, too, do cases of after-school vandalism. After several months of exploring various solutions, the board voted to purchase and install a Hammond Security System in district schools. Initial cost of the "silent" system will be $3,300, with an annual fee of $180 for a telecommunication alert that reports any break-in to a central audiodetector.

In response to past complaints about the cafeteria program and the food served, and in the knowledge that this service is running in the red, the board agreed to seek outside advice on its school lunch system. The administration was authorized to discuss alternatives and recommendations on service and menus with the State Education Department.

Board members also joined a host of other local officials in Ulster County who have expressed dissatisfaction that their application for a federal Public Works project was denied. The district's proposal for a $576,429 multi-purpose building had not been approved. However members seemed hopeful that it might still be reconsidered.

In other business at last night's meeting, the board:

- Appointed Rev. John Needham, Robert Martin and John O'Rourke as a committee to meet with a similar committee of the Saugerties Teachers Association to develop procedures in regard to sabbaticals, a matter members felt had "serious financial implications."

- Took under advisement the fact that the following personnel will be eligible for tenure this year: Betty Larsen, Joseph Modica, Robert Moser, Robert Potter, Frances Buono, Janet Clarke, Nancy Dooley, Mary Elmore, Joseph Fondino, Barbara Hendricks, Dennis Jones and Sandra Ostoyich. Also: William Perks, Sharon Tynan, Maureen VanDeusen, Ernelinda Cuono, Phyllis Glassbrook, Ida Lauffer, Robert Lawless, Kathi Lund, Gloria Meggison, David Mungo and Colleen Ryan.

- Heard trustee O'Rourke report that budget preparations are underway, based as much as possible on zero based budgeting. He noted, however, that with presentation of the budget due in March, and because accounting procedures are expensive initially, the totally "ideal" method of zero budgeting will not be fully instituted this year.

- Approved an extended leave of absence for Michael W. Piatek Jr. from September 1977 through January 1978. Piatek's request for "absence with pay as permitted in the STA contract, was subject to the superintendent's decision and whether a substitute would be necessary to fill his position during his absence."

- Accepted the following list of substitute teachers: Delores Kronenberg, Janice Bucci, Sally Sober, Peter Finger, Patricia Berg, Gail Ferris, Marilyn Hulbert, Carolyn Millonig, Donna Sharon Area, Isabelle Hackett, Roxanne Morrison and Patricia Steinhilber were named teacher-aide substitutes.

- Accepted the resignation of Mildred Gramlin, whose husband is being transferred, as lunchroom monitor at the Senior High School, and appointed Patricia Turco to that position. Also appointed as a typist at Mt. Marion School was Nancy Mower.

- Approved the Jaycee Associates Club as a new extra curricular activity at the High School.

- Authorized the approval of the initial request of BOCES services for 1977-78.

- Approved salary adjustments for part-time hourly bus drivers, print shop workers, and audio-visual helpers of $2.20 per hour, all retroactive to Sept. 1, 1976. All employees involved will now receive $2.50 per hour.

- Changed the meeting hour of the regular monthly board meetings from 7:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. All meetings throughout the year will continue to be held on the second Tuesday of each month, and sessions will be rotated in various schools of the district by special announcement.

Scholarship Total One of State's Largest

Pageant Committee Seeking Miss Ulster

KINGSTON—Miss America is somewhere in Ulster County and the Miss Ulster County Pageant committee is determined to find her.

Noting that the local pageant's $1,850 in scholarship prizes is one of the highest awards in the state, the committee announced yesterday that it is seeking women between the ages of 17 and 23 who would like to compete for the honor of representing the county at the Miss New York State Pageant this summer and, hopefully, at the Miss America Pageant in September.

According to S. James Mathews, this year's entries chairman, applications are now available by contacting him at his Kingston office or by stopping by the Ulster County Chamber of Commerce office. The Chamber sponsors the annual event.

In discussing this year's pageant, Executive Director George Leombruno emphasized that it is a scholarship foundation and he pointed out that the committee is interested in women who are talented, as well as in possession of good "physical attributes."

He also noted that talent does not only mean singing and dancing, but could also mean painting, gymnastics, photography, design or any one of a number of other abilities.

"There are no losers," said Leombruno, "because everyone comes away from the pageant with something good."

One person who said she came away from last year's pageant with something good was Faye Fogal, the winner of the scholarship who competed in Olean last summer for the Miss New York State title. In reflecting on her year as Miss Ulster County, Miss Fogal termed it "an experience in meeting people and gaining self-confidence."

In addition to the top prize of $1,000, two runner-up scholarships of $500 and $350 are also awarded annually.

The money can be used to either further the recipients' education through accredited colleges or through private instruction in anything that might be considered a valid learning experience.

This year's pageant will be held at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School in Kingston March 26.

Nearly 2,000 Are Feared Dead

Volcanoes Erupt in Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — A volcanic eruption has killed nearly 2,000 persons in eastern Zaire, officials in the region said today.

The 11,400-foot Nyrangongo volcano, near the town of Goma in the eastern Kivu province, began erupting Monday. Today two new volcanoes started erupting in the same region, on the shores of Lake Kivu, where mountains tower more than 14,500 feet.

Kivu provincial officials confirmed the estimate of a death toll of nearly 2,000 made by diplomatic officials in Kinshasa.

Details of precisely where and how the victims were killed were not immediately available.

But the official reports said thousands of Africans from

Goma and the nearby region of Zaire — the former Belgian Congo — were fleeing across the adjacent border into the small neighbor states of Rwanda and Burundi.

The Zaire news agency said there was "considerable damage" to property but gave no details of the damage.

Two slight earthquakes shook the same region last week, before Nyrangongo started erupting. But the shocks caused no casualties and no damage was reported from the tremors.

President Mobutu Sese-Seko, absent from the country on a visit to Lome, capital of the West African Togo republic, sent his interior minister to the scene of the eruption to report on the situation, the Zaire news agency said.

A team of Belgian senators who have been visiting Zaire since Jan. 3 was in the Goma region when the volcano started erupting.

Lava spreading over the runways of Goma airport prevented regular airliners from using the airport. But a small plane sent by the Kinshasa government succeeded in landing and flying the Belgian senators out to Kinshasa after a 48-hour delay.

Diplomatic officials said the small airport was cut in two by the lava and the eruption made most roads in the region impossible. Records showed the Nyrangongo volcano last erupted in 1972. But Zaire officials said so far as they knew there were no deaths recorded in earlier eruptions.

CAPITOL CAPSULE

Unions Critical of Governor

AFL-CIO
Gov. Hugh Carey's "State of the State" message contained a "most deplorable" lack of programs to boost workers' benefits, according to the state AFL-CIO executive council. The group, which heads the two-million-member union coalition, said Carey had failed to propose needed reforms in unemployment, workmen's compensation and sickness disability benefits. Earning support were Carey's proposals for a $200 million tax cut, as long as it does not mean reduced programs, and a $750 million capital development bond. The council complained that New York had slipped to 42nd in the nation in terms of total disability benefits, 34th in temporary disability help and 32nd in unemployment aid.

SENATE
In naming chairmen of Senate committees for the 1977 session, Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson has shifted four Republicans to new committee chairmanships. James Donovan of New Hartford replaced Leon Guiffreda of Centerville as chairman of the Education Committee. Guiffreda retired. Frank Padavan of Queens takes Donovan's place as head of Mental Hygiene. Roy Goodman of Manhattan will head Taxation and Governmental Operations. Caesar Trunzo of Brentwood replaces Goodman on the Housing and Community Development Committee. The new posts are worth a $7,000 leadership stipend or "lulu" for Donovan, and $5,000 each for Goodman, Padavan and Trunzo.

PAROLE
Forty Republican state lawmakers have sent a telegram to the Parole Board protesting Gov. Hugh Carey's commutation of the sentence of John Hill, who was convicted of the murder of a guard in the 1971 Attica prison riot. Hill is to go before a parole board this week for possible release. Sen. Dale Volker of Depew, a spokesman for the group, said in a statement, "Every citizen of the state who is concerned with upholding our system of justice and showing those who would rebuke it that cold-blooded murderers will not go free urge you to deny parole." The family of William Quinn, the guard Hill was convicted of killing, last week sent a letter of protest to the governor.

MAYORS
Representatives of the state's mayors say they are encouraged by legislative leader's appreciation of their communities' problems, although they have received no firm commitments. A delegation from the state Conference of Mayors met with Republican Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson and Democratic Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut. "It was a good start for the legislative year,"

Hempstead Mayor Dalton Miller, president of the conference, told a news conference after the talks. He said the delegation told the leaders reductions in state aid would harm localities and urged them to end compulsory arbitration in police and fire department contract disputes and to limit state-mandated programs. Miller said Anderson and Steingut were "cooperative," but added, "It's too early in the session to get firm commitments."

INSURANCE
Albert Todaro of Ossining was named as a member of the State Insurance Fund, the governor's office announced. Todaro, 40, is a senior trust officer with Chemical Bank. The fund provides workmen's compensation insurance to employers and ensures benefits for nonoccupational disabilities and for volunteer firemen, the governor's office said. If confirmed by the Senate, Todaro would serve a term ending Dec. 31, 1979, and paying $100 a day to a maximum of $3,000 annually.

SCHUMAN
Gov. Hugh Carey named Daniel Schuman, chairman of the board of directors of Bausch and Lomb, to the State Energy Research and Development Authority. The 60-year-old Rochester resident was a representative of the public on the unsalaried board, which studies new forms of energy and energy conservation. If confirmed by the Senate, he will serve until April 1, 1982.

oil or other hydrocarbon pollution since it went into operation in 1964, he said. The system has a minimum storage capacity of 1 million gallons of treated water.

News of water supplies being subjected to chemicals other than the standard chlorine creates interesting psychological effects on water users, VanOrmer mused.

He recalled a lady in Kingston complaining some years ago that fluoride had loosened teeth in dentures she had left overnight in a glass of water. However, the water supply hadn't been fluoridated. The Kingston Common Council merely had discussed the possibility on a previous night.

The Rheinauer tanker will be inspected in drydock, the Coast Guard said, and the owners will be subject to a $1 to $5,000 fine by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Because of ice conditions on the river, the Coast Guard said it couldn't remove the kerosene spill.

The river flows south at about two knots an hour, although the current is complicated by tidal and other factors.

Intuition Leads to Arrest

KINGSTON — A Town of Ulster police dispatcher's intuition led the arrest Tuesday afternoon of a Kingston man who is alleged to have struck and injured two Hurley teenage girls on Broadway and left the scene of the accident.

Lawrence Scarth, 35, of Ulster Avenue Mall, was arrested by Kingston City Police for leaving the scene and driving while intoxicated.

Mary Albano, 18, of 25 Russell Road, Hurley, and Lynn Schufeldt, 15, of 27 Main St., Hurley, were taken to Kingston Hospital by Doctor's Ambulance.

Ms. Albano reportedly suffered a fracture and head and pelvic-abdomen injuries and Ms. Schufeldt sustained contusions and bruises.

Scarth was proceeding south on Broadway when the accident occurred near Andrew Street.

It was Joan McCloskey, dispatcher for the Town of Ulster Police who heard the report of a hit and run accident on a radio scanner about 12:30 p.m. A short while later she received a telephone call from the man believe to be Scarth who said he had been in an accident but could not elaborate further.

Ms. McCloskey put two and two together, informed Police Chief Meyer Levy who found the wanted car and Scarth at his trailer home near Michael's Diner.

Kingston City Police praised the work of the Town of Ulster Police Department who found Scarth so quickly.

Scarth was committed to Ulster County Jail pending a court appearance today.

Ellenville State Police report that Marchuck's sled was caught under the vehicle driven by Michael Smith, 18, of Walker Valley, who was travelling north on Maple Avenue.

No summons was issued.

Impressed by Family

Dear Sir:
I find myself at a loss to understand the reason behind the Legislature's refusal to include in the budget funds for Family of Woodstock.

As a person involved in the field of social services, I am not only impressed with the skills of Family, but grateful for a dependable, knowledgeable agency that is always willing to help. Their dedication is unequalled and reaches out in many directions. As for what is apparently the biggest bone of contention, namely, the runaways—I heard someone say, "If my child ran away from home I'd surely hope they'd have a place like Family to run to."

I fear too many of us are not seeing the whole picture and it makes me sad.

Environment Test Awaits Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter's campaign promise to protect the environment will be tested this year when he is caught between the high expectations of conservationists and the growing demands of Americans for energy.

Carter appears to be the most conservation-conscious president to take office since Lyndon Johnson stalked the White House turning out lights. But unemployment and the economy clearly will be Carter's first concerns when he takes office, and there are powerful pressures present to counter-balance his wish to preserve the environment.

It is hard to predict whether Carter will try to "set a tone" of environmental concern or will be an activist seeking to clean up America's air, water and strip-mined lands. But if the new president tries to remain neutral on some of the issues, efforts will be made to force his hand.

"I don't think any of us are naive enough to feel we're not going to have fights with him as we did with Nixon or Ford," said Brock Evans of the Sierra Club. "But we (environmentalists) do expect more access and more consideration and better decisions. We certainly have higher expectations.

"Even if it's 40 or 50 per cent better, it's great," he added — "better than nothing..."

Rep. Morris Udall, in line to chair the House interior committee, told a National Wildlife Federation conference recently Carter has a good record, good understanding and good concern for the environment.

"We're going to be able to do a lot of the things we've wanted to do for a long time," he said.

Carter already has named Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, a moderate but respected conservationist, to head the Interior Department. And he promised to "bring concern for the quality of the environment to the White House."

Udall was floor manager of the strip-mining reclamation bill twice vetoed by President Ford because of its effect on jobs. The Arizona Democrat hopes to get similar legislation passed quickly with White House approval this time around.

Udall said other early priorities of the new Congress will be a federal land use policy and legislation to protect more than 100 million acres of Alaskan wilderness.

During the campaign, Carter pledged to restore and protect the ill-funded and short-staffed national park system and provide money for parkland acquisition. He promised to end neglect of the nation's wildlife refuges and said he favored limits on clearcutting in national forests.

The clash between conservation and energy is especially evident in a number of problems Carter may have to confront early in his term. These include offshore oil drilling, nuclear power development and proposals to strengthen or weaken clean air and water laws.

Carter has criticized the Ford administration for "abdication of its responsibility" to make sure atomic plants are safe, expressed concern about nuclear proliferation and said only "responsible development" of oil and gas should be allowed on the outer continental shelf.

Like Ford, he favors increased use of coal as a way to reduce the nation's reliance on foreign oil but does not have the same enthusiasm for accelerating western strip mining.

A compromise Clean Air Amendments bill postponing application of auto emission standards died by filibuster in the last Congress. Carter has not stated where he will stand on new legislation, but said in policy papers issued during the campaign auto makers must meet emission standards "just as soon as the times allow."

He said control of toxic chemicals into U.S. waterways will be an "immediate priority" of his administration, as well as other sources of water pollution. But he also noted many industries and towns will not meet 1977 standards for clean water and did not say how this problem should be met.

On other subjects, Carter has said he will halt construction of "unnecessary dams" by the Army Corps of Engineers and his administration will help strengthen the image of the Environmental Protection Agency.

A number of conservation laws were passed during the last eight years, especially following the first Earth Day in 1971, but many environmentalists feel Nixon and Ford only went through the motions of supporting conservation. Outgoing Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe told reporters a few months ago he didn't think Americans would respond to appeals to conserve energy unless they saw visible evidence of a fuel crisis — such as the long service station lines during the Arab oil embargo.

But Carter seems willing to try. He has not spelled out his policies, but even on inauguration day Carter is symbolizing his hopes for a clean, fuel-efficient future by using a reviewing stand equipped to produce solar energy.

Here Comes the Veep

WASHINGTON (KFS) — With the inauguration almost upon us, we are beginning to get the little homilies about how the promises were not so much commitments as goals to be striven for and let's be practical. In this instance, the Peanut is already explaining to us that we should understand that even though he is contemplating increasing the war allocations he said he would cut, he is actually cutting them by increasing them less than he would have increased them if he hadn't cut them. If you have trouble following that argument, you may take comfort in the fact that you probably aren't alone.

At least Veep Mondale continues to get his picture taken with the President-elect. Moreover, instead of leaving off the campaign talk about the need and the utility of finding the Vice President worthwhile and ennobling work, the President-elect has said that this Vice President will actually have an office down the hall from his own and will function as the White House's chief staff officer, whatever that means.

If it means anything at all, it will mean that Walter Mondale will become the busiest and most powerful Vice President since Henry Agard Wallace (1941-45). By naming his wartime Vice President head of the Board of Economic Warfare, an office that did everything from pinpoint economically strategic targets for bombardment to carry out world-wide raw material procurement, FDR gave Henry Wallace more executive branch power than any man to hold the job since.

It may have been because Wallace had too much power that Roosevelt decided to replace him with Truman. Beyond his official power, Wallace had great stature: as the successful editor of the nation's most important farming magazine, as a businessman, as a plant geneticist, and as a Secretary of Agriculture who is still thought by some at least to have been the best we ever had. Wallace's greatest power, however, derived from his being, after Roosevelt himself, THE symbol of New Deal liberalism.

After FDR's death, Henry Wallace was to Harry Truman what Ronald Reagan was to Jerry Ford last summer — the authentic voice of the party in the minds of the most active and dedicated campaign workers. Inside the cabinet, Wallace, who continued to serve Truman as Secretary of Commerce, increasingly annoyed the conservative Missourian. (How conservative Truman was can best be appreciated by the fact that in death he has been absorbed into the Republican Party where he is loved and idolized as he never was in life by his fellow Democrats.)

Henry Wallace could never have lived happily with a President who tried to settle labor disputes by demanding of Congress the right to draft strikers into the army and who is remembered by historians, if not by the popularizers of history, as the man who began the loyalty programs and blacklists to which the name McCarthyism was subsequently given. What drove Truman to fire Wallace was the man's continuous, public opposition to the President's declaring the Cold War, or as he used to put it, "getting tough with the Russians."

To the perpetual war Truman gave to his country, Henry Wallace said, "Our present program will result in one impasse after another which will eventually result in war a number of years hence; or it will provoke a war in the relatively near future... it will require at least five million men in the armed forces — and probably eight million. It will require an annual appropriation of at least fifty billion dollars a year... Once America stands for opposition to change we are lost. America will become the most hated nation in the world." Not bad for 1947.

The next year Wallace ran for president on a third-party ticket and got his ashes hauled for him by a mass media which ruined him by calling him a dupe, stooge and a pupil of the Pinkos. By today's thinking, Wallace's Progressive Party platform is almost tepid enough for Jerry Ford to run on... votes for 18-year-olds, federal aid to education, closing tax loopholes, "raising women to first class citizenship," and a federal anti-lynching law. Most important he was the last major public figure until Richard Nixon to advocate the practicality and necessity of detente, peaceful coexistence and disarmament.

The substance of Wallace's foreign policy and defense contentions was never debated. By depicting him as a dupe and his associates as fellow travelers, Truman avoided having to answer his arguments. Then 25 years later for a brief time they were resurrected, often by a generation that didn't even know the man's name, and for a few years we've had foreign policy debate again in America.

But that debate is waning. Carter and the bellicists he has surrounded himself with limit themselves to talking about budget cuts for arms for reasons of efficiency. It is suggested that it is very important that the Pentagon not "waste" money, as if the more than a thousand billion dollars spent on the implements of death since World War II weren't a waste.

Making the devil's distinction between waste-waste and efficient waste gives us no highly placed person in the government to campaign, as Henry Wallace did, against the waste for war per se. In the executive, in Congress, in the media, there are fewer and fewer who still speak of peace as an absolute and not as a strategic ploy in a re-declared Cold War.

Maybe Walter Mondale can be that spokesman, that needed peace leader. In so many ways he is such a good man you wonder what he's doing with Carter and those other new playmates of his. But a good man isn't a great man, and you can no more demand greatness of a fellow human than you can condemn another person for being a congenital nerd.

Loyal to the Home Team

The football season is over. For me, it's the best game in town. Maybe the only game in town. It's the coliseum in Rome. It's gladiators; King Arthur and the Knights. It's a gang fight in an alley. It's war; chess with shoulder pads.

I'm a Miami Dolphin fan. Yesterday, today, tomorrow. They were six and eight this year, which sounds like crooked dice. The sports writers speak patiently of busted knees. The Dolphins played badly. They didn't need loyalty when they were 17 and zip.

They need it now. They need 75,000 fans like me. We'll be there in August, following every play like 75,000 head coaches. It is the nature of the game to make snatling, roaring beasts of its fans.

I haven't met Don Shula, the head coach, but I know he's the best. He's a perfectionist; a teeth-grinder; a pacer who never wants to see third and long. The only reason he doesn't leave the sidelines and carry the ball is because it's illegal. He's got the record book in his pocket. Sometimes he can sit in a dark room with his team and freeze-frame a blocker or a linebacker out of position four times. He likes to pace off first downs on the ground; a real estate man.

His assistant coaches sit in a glass booth next to our seats. They are formidable men. Mike Scarry, Carl Taseff, Tom Keane and Howard Schnellenberger watch the plays from high up, and phone their observations down to Shula.

There is a big hole in the side of their booth. Our Karen and Kathleen grew up learning a brand new language from these gentlemen. The girls' mother taught them to be ladies, to pretend that they heard nothing. And yet, when they become frustrated with school work, it is refreshing to note that they remember some of those short and obtuse words.

No coach in either conference can match Shula's record of 144 won, 47 lost, 5 tied. The coaching staff was better than the team, even when Miami won two Super Bowls.

The man behind the Dolphins is a half-Irish, half-Lebanese kid, Joe Robbie. He came out of South Dakota like a runaway rocket. Everybody knew that Miami was palm trees, sunshine and surf. It surely wasn't football, unless you want to count scores of high schools which seemed to have thousands of little kids in big helmets running all over the turf.

Robbie believed. He is the kind of fighter nobody wants to meet in an alley. He got the franchise when he didn't have the money. I didn't know that pro football players were paid every Monday for 14 Mondays until I met him.

Every Friday he flew to Chicago to borrow the payroll from a bank. They have a revolving door they plan to bronze and mail to Joe. He earned it. The Dolphins were the wrong team in the wrong town at the wrong time. If they won

4 and lost 10 it was a going season.

Nobody knows how Liz lived with him through those years. She's a little smiler who rolls with the punches. When Shula left Baltimore, he cut a fillet out of the Dolphins and shook hands with Robbie. "Stay off the sidelines," he said.

Geniuses are like geni. They are at their best when they remain in their own bottles. The Dolphins earned the admiration of both conferences and a seven-syllabled exclamation from Howard Cosell. The time came for them to fall apart — as the old Bears and Giants did and the Packers too.

The 75,000 head coaches point gravely to busted knees. They point to the loss of Warfield, Kikic and Caonka. It doesn't matter that Caonka flopped with the Giants and Kikic spends his time looking at mountains in Denver. They think that trading Jake Scott was a skull.

It doesn't matter. The reason I'm a Dolphin fan is because they are exciting to watch whether they win or lose. Even when they blow it, I spend a little time sitting, most of the time standing.

This year I heard Miami fans boo their quarterback. It's their privilege. It's a license that goes with a ticket. And yet a losing team is the test of loyalty. You sorrow with the men on the field. You grieve. You about your anger.

The important thing is that you're there...

We'll Pay For Most Of Spills

WASHINGTON — With one oil tanker after another bleeding oil upon our seacoasts, the American people not only are stuck with the environmental blight but must also pay most of the clean-up costs.

The secret papers of the shipowners reveal how they bamboozled Congress in the late 1960s to absolve them from financial liability. They anticipated the nasty oil spillages, which have now polluted our shores. They lobbied behind the scenes, therefore, to make sure they wouldn't have to pay the damages.

In fact, they foresaw an environmental catastrophe, which hasn't yet happened. Some day, they expect a giant, 200,000-ton super-tanker to break up and belch 50 million to 80 million gallons of oil into our coastal waters. This would be enough to stain the surf and blacken the beaches for hundreds of miles.

We began to investigate the oil industry's awesome power to pollute after the tanker Argo Merchant broke apart on a shoal off Nantucket and gushed more than seven million gallons of oil into a pounding sea.

We made trips out of state and out of the country to question oil insiders. We obtained documents in both English and Greek, proving that the international petroleum and shipping industries blocked the laws, which might have saved our coasts from the oil blight.

In Athens, Brussels, Lisbon, London, New York and Rome, according to these documents, international oil men, shippers and insurance moguls conspired privately as early as 1967 to thwart the U.S. antipollution bills.

They were worried about the inevitability of oil spills. The huge supertankers carried enough oil to contaminate an entire seacoast. These long, whale-shaped sea monsters were constructed of such thin steel for their size, warned the experts, that they would rip apart if they should ever run aground.

Members of Congress, foreseeing the danger, began drafting some tough liability laws. This U.S. move could set a worldwide standard, which could raise insurance rates sky high or even make the supertankers uninsurable, the shipowners feared.

From their viewpoint, the most dangerous measures were introduced by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Me., and Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla. The bills would have assessed the clean-up costs to the industries that make a profit from oil.

The shipowners tracked these bills more carefully than they had ever monitored a storm at sea. "Prospects of the (Muskie) bill's passage..." warned one lobbyist gloomily, "are considered to be very good."

The shipping lobbyists were joined by the oil lobbyists. "The American Petroleum Institute will lobby to limit the liability of a shipowner," happily reported one agent to his Athens-based bosses.

Meanwhile, shippers and insurers met privately in Rome in late 1967 to consider the problem. This was followed four months later by another secret meeting in Lisbon. They finally agreed, according to a memo by one of the participants, to oppose "strict liability on shipowners for damage caused by the escape of oil."

They hoped to limit the liability of shipowners merely to a polite explanation. "The owners of a vessel from which oil has escaped, causing pollution, (should) explain how the oil was permitted to escape," it was proposed.

In case of a disastrous oil spill, in other words, the insurance-shipping crowd wanted to let the owners off with a simple account of the accident. It would be left to the victims to clean up the oily mess.

Representatives of the world insurance and shipping industries slipped up to Capitol Hill in July, 1968 to sell this idea to the House Public Works Committee. They paid a quiet call on Richard Sullivan, the chief counsel, who was processing the antipollution legislation.

"We were pleased to learn," one agent wrote back to his superiors, that Sullivan would "abandon" the idea of holding the shipowners and oil companies totally liable for their oil accidents. The lobbyists also "argued strenuously against (unlimited) liability for removal costs" of spilled oil. "Mr. Sullivan and his staff finally agreed," the memo reported triumphantly.

According to the document, Sullivan then "met separately with representatives of the American Petroleum Institute... Thereafter, another revision of the bill was prepared." This contained additional concessions.

Crowded one shipping representative: "We believe (the concessions) would accomplish as good a result as the shipowners and their (insurance) clubs could hope to achieve in any oil pollution bill which the United States Congress might pass." It should not, the memo added, "have any serious effect on the (insurance) premiums."

Yet even this limited antipollution measure was kept off the law books for two more years. It provided for a moderate boost in liability, with no real means for collecting on oil disasters.

Footnote: The able Sullivan, who was merely carrying out orders, told us he remembered the 1968 meetings. He admitted the memo made him "look like I was in somebody's pocket." But he insisted he had acted in what he thought was the public interest. "Maybe I should have been tougher," he said, sighing.

Plugging a Snow Day for All

Oil companies have a device to keep them happy which they call the windfall. They are not alone, though. Schoolchildren have their own kind of windfall, called the "snow day."

They, however, call it SNOW DAY!

The shout goes up at 6:30 in the morning when I'm trying to get through my last half-hour of sleep undisturbed.

Do they turn around, shuck off their clothes, and snuggle in for three more hours of slumber?

No, in a word.

They jump into their boots, coats, and mittens and, no matter if the snow is whistling in at gale force or it's sleeting, they go out and shovel it, throw it, ski in it, roll in it—whatever they deem necessary to celebrate their windfall.

I suspect the snow day is what gives school-children—and teachers—a renewed faith in the benevolence of powers beyond their control. The snow day has religious significance.

Like the sabbath, it interrupts the routine of work-a-day institutions. But with an extra dimension. It drops from the wings of the wind, as though God-sent, unheralded. And all of our best minds put together can't predict it with certainty even an hour ahead of time.

A snowstorm, by itself, is not sufficient cause for a snow day. A foot of fine dry snow won't keep the buses from rolling. Dry snow isn't slippery.

Also, a snowstorm beginning at 8 in the evening and ending at midnight won't do it. The plows have time to get out and make the roads passable again before schoolbus time.

The crucial factors are temperature and timing. And I don't know of anyone who can time a snowstorm or set its thermostat.

The ideal conditions leading up to a snow day are (1) the storm starts between midnight and 5 a.m., (2) the snow is wet or mixed with freezing rain, and (3) it occurs on the eve of a weekday. Then you've got a winner.

Now, even if you're a meteorologist who dabbles in cloudbusting, you've got to admit that's a tall order. It takes something bigger than all of us to pull that off.

You may wonder where my vast knowledge of the snow day comes from. Well, not only was I a schoolboy; I was also a teacher. My recollection of the snow day is warm and fresh.

And I want to tell you right now that there are few phenomena in this life that contain the emotional healing power of a snow day.

Imagine your raucous alarm going off. You grope blindly and knock the clock onto its back. It's another morning in a long line of trudging mornings that stretches behind you for years. You keep your eyelids up through sheer concentration.

You see outside, through your eyelashes, a faint light diffusing the world. But it has a certain quality, as though there were...Yes, there is! Snow!

You're into the kitchen with an alacrity you haven't shown for months. Your hand trembles as you turn on the radio.

You aren't hungry at all. Coffee is plenty. You sit glued to the pre-dawn radio, listening to "Morning is bray-king," to which you nod philosophical agreement but wish the station turntable would blow its fuse.

Finally the announcer: "And now the news. In Boise, Idaho, today..." All right, all right! "Here are the latest school closings. Highland schools are closed, Poughkeepsie schools, Albany schools, Utica schools..." Then finally yours. Finally! All Right!

You flip off the radio. Empty the coffee cup into the sink. That class you hadn't figured out what to do with can now be dealt with. (Later.)

The damaging juices of an ugly mood have been stemmed. All of those children you would have cowed today with irrational fright as they walked through your classroom door are now spared. The wrinkles you would have added around your eyes have been put off for another day.

You feel human, loving, patient. You smile on mankind. You go back to bed without bothering to set the alarm.

The benefits of the snow day go very deep into the human psyche. The next day man greets the students with a smile. Not just because the week is starting with Tuesday, but because (and this is what counts) he has been the beneficiary of a windfall. Uncanny coincidence has smiled on him. For once, surprise hasn't flattened his nose.

I'm coming out in favor of having the snow day declared a day off for everybody. Even the highway department and radio announcers.

ture telling you this day is a snow day?

And then just reach over, pick up your bedside microphone, and say, "Good morning, radioland. I have the pleasure to inform you that today everything is closed. This is John Betaudier, Bill Skilling, signing off until tomorrow. We're not even going to tell you the frequency and the kilowatts."

Smith Still Adamant

The four Rhodesian - or Zimbabwe - black leaders who have been holding out in Geneva for more or less instant control of an interim government keep outbidding each other in intransigence. U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger may have promised the white Rhodesian Prime Minister, Ian Smith, that whites would be permitted to control the sensitive areas of government for a two-year waiting period while the ultimate forms of a black majority rule in Salisbury were hammered out. But the black leaders, eyeing each other, insist that the Kissinger formula must be considered negotiable.

There is Robert Mugabe, the socialist schoolteacher who has his relations with guerrilla fighters who base themselves in Mozambique. Naturally he considers that he would lose face with his foreign supporters, the source of guns and ammunition, if he were to accept Ian Smith's interpretation of the Kissinger agreement in the name of his Zimbabwe African National Union. Competing with Mugabe for domination of the Rhodesian future is Joshua Nkomo, an ex-trade union leader who heads the Zimbabwe African People's Union. The other factional leaders are Bishop Abel Muzorewa, an American-educated Methodist cleric, and the Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole, who disputes with Mugabe the claims to leadership of the African National Union.

Ian Smith, who, no matter

what else may be said of him, is a tough cookie, considers he is quite within his rights in holding that Kissinger had made a hard-and-fast commitment to Rhodesia's 270,000 white minority. Moreover, he insists that the four black Rhodesian representatives at the Geneva talks cannot be accepted as majority spokesmen for Rhodesia's six million blacks even when one adds their partisans together. Since there has never been a proper Gallup poll of Rhodesian blacks, nobody is in a good position to say that Smith is wrong. So what is going to happen?

Let us suppose that, at some stage of the game, Ian Smith simply declares that he is willing to turn over the government to blacks who are ready to accept the Kissinger formula. He can certainly find them. Chief Chirau of the Shona-speaking tribe and Chief Ndiweni of the Matabele tribe both resigned recently from the Smith Cabinet to form their own indigenous parties. What impressed John Davenport, a former editor of Fortune magazine, during his recent trip to southern Africa is that many Rhodesian blacks have a quite justified fear of being ground to pieces between parties taking their cues - and their weapons - from abroad. Chiefs like Chirau and Ndiweni might be willing to stand apart from the four factional leaders in Geneva if they were to have assurances that an interim government would last long enough to take a plebiscite that would determine the true desires of Rhodesia's six million blacks. Naturally, the Soviets, whose adherents now control the neighboring governments of Mozambique and Angola, would not look with favor on a plebiscite unless they were sure to win it. But Ian Smith would be in a favorable position to stall practically forever if his opponents were to block the effort to determine a true majority.

If Smith were to turn the government over to a black regime on his own in exchange for certain property concessions to the white minority, it would certainly clarify things. We would soon know the intentions of the Russians and the Cubans. If they were to move against an all-black Rhodesian government as they moved in Angola after the Portuguese had left, we would soon know the true desires of a lot of Rhodesian tribes. If they wanted to fight, they would have a legitimate claim to help from abroad. This might not serve to keep the Communist Left from pouring in the weapons from Mozambique to put a Communist stooge government in control in Salisbury. But at least the West would know the truth: the Communists are out to win in Africa with no particular concern for democracy or majority rule.

Knowing Smith for the tough hombre that he is, we may be sure he'll try to play it out to the end. He has nothing to lose.

Architecture to Tell It All

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Architects, while fine folks as a rule, tend at times to become aesthetically overwrought.

A classic example of rapturous overkill may be found in a press release from the 1977 Inaugural Committee describing the White House reviewing stand where President-elect Carter will watch next week's inaugural parade.

The committee, whose appreciation of the design may have made it a bit giddy, says the stand will make "seven statements" about Carter's "values and his basic philosophies."

By my count, that is four more statements than emanate from such architectural gems as Frank Lloyd Wright's Greek church in Wauwatosa, Wis., and Le Corbusier's chapel in Ronchamp, France.

Even so loquacious an edifice as the Taj Mahal only makes five statements, as I understand it.

The press release quotes one of the architects who drew up the blueprints as saying that "humility, closeness to the people, concern for the ecology, concern for our resources, historical preservation and even his policy on energy will be expressed by the design of this stand."

It says: "the size, the canting, the materials and even the foundation will tell the people a lot about their president."

And it adds that the "starkly simple" facility will cost $170,000.

Leaving aside the question of how anything that costs $170,000 can be equated with stark simplicity, I fear the reviewing stand will be saying a lot more than the average parade watcher will be able to comprehend.

While the average parade watcher may be able to grasp what the structure's size, materials and foundation are telling him, any statements made by the canting likely will be over his head.

Which probably is just as well. For anything the canting says probably will be pure cant anyhow.

Bear in mind that the reviewing stand is only one of the architectural triumphs of the inauguration.

After reading the press release on the reviewing stand, I decided to see what sort of statements the inaugural platform might be making. Here are some of the things it told me:

— It is one of the biggest boondoggles of all times.

— Expenditure of a comparable amount of time, money, effort and materials probably would replace all the substandard housing in the average American slum.

Chrysler Fuel Book Available

DETROIT, Mich.—Cars with automatic transmissions are easier to drive than those equipped with manual transmissions, but how does that automatic option affect the gas mileage of the new car you're thinking about buying?

"In these days there is considerably more consumer interest in fuel economy," says F.G. Hazelroth, general manager of Chrysler Corporation's Service and Parts Sales Division. "Our 1977 edition of our consumer's guide to fuel economy is a basic, simple lesson in that new science."

The informative booklet, prepared for Chrysler-Plymouth and Dodge dealership salesmen, is available to the public at no cost. It explains many aspects of fuel economy such as engine size, drive train combinations, the effect of individual driving habits and maintenance practices, and the way various equipment options can boost or detract from miles per gallon fuel economy.

The brochure details how EPA mileage figures are obtained each year through a series of laboratory tests. All EPA mileage figures for 1977

Chrysler products are in the booklet and there are estimates of the effect of various equipment options on mileage.

Chrysler prepared a specially-equipped 1977 Dodge Aspen two-door coupe recently to demonstrate how driving habits can affect gas mileage. The car was equipped with special electronic odometer and fuel meters to permit exact mileage computation over short driving segments.

"Tests determined that mileage obtained can vary greatly when different drivers operate the same car under identical conditions," Hazelroth said, and added, "everyone believes that he or she is the world's greatest fuel economy driver until results are compared with other drivers. The point of our 'Guide to Fuel Economy' booklet is to help everyone get better fuel economy by ordering a car with their right equipment and then using the right driving habits."

The "1977 Guide to Fuel Economy" is now available at no cost by writing "1977 Guide to Fuel Economy," Chrysler Corporation, P.O. Box 7749, Detroit, Mich., 48207.

Little Opposition to Other Carter Choices

Bell Blocks Tidy Cabinet Lockup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Except for Attorney General-designate Griffin Bell, little opposition is shaping up to Jimmy Carter's Cabinet choices in informal Senate confirmation hearings.

Equally little trouble was expected for another Carter appointee, W. Michael Blumenthal. The Senate Finance Committee scheduled a hearing today to examine the nomination of the Bendix Corp. chairman as treasury secretary.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington NAACP office, planned to testify in the second day of hearings on the Bell nomination in the Senate Judiciary Committee today and to voice his organization's opposition to the appointment of the former federal judge who grew up near the president's hometown.

Liberal members of the committee pressed Bell in Tuesday's hearing about his record on civil rights and his support of former Florida Judge G. Harold Carswell to be a member of the Supreme Court.

Bell acknowledged making "wrong" decisions on denying admission of black legislator Julian Bond to the Georgia House and on the use of federal wiretap procedures.

Bell said blacks in his home state support him. He promised to have a "vigorous civil rights division," use busing if need be to integrate schools, and appoint a black — U.S. Circuit Judge Wade McCree of Detroit — as solicitor general.

As for Carswell, he said he had not endorsed him, only recommended him, and he predicted that his tombstone would be engraved with the words "He wrote a letter about Judge Carswell."

Friendly questions and support were voiced at hearings for other Carter choices —

Cyrus Vance as secretary of state, Harold Brown as defense secretary, former Rep. Robert Bergland as agriculture secretary, and former Budget Director Charles Schultze as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

The Senate Agriculture Committee agreed unanimously to send Bergland's nomination to the full Senate.

Nearly every member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee prefaced his questions with praise for Vance. "I don't sense your confirmation is in deep trouble," Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, told him, smiling.

Vance said, "it was a mistake for the United States to be in Vietnam." As deputy defense secretary during the U.S. build-up in Southeast Asia, he said, "I made more than my share of mistakes" in formulating U.S. policy there.

Brown said he and Carter agree that $5 billion to $7 billion in waste can be cut from the Pentagon but it probably will be next year before the savings actually begin.

Brown also testified that it isn't necessary for the United States "to match the Soviet Union in every measure of strategic capability that one can think up."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said he saw "no problem at all" in Schultze being confirmed as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. "You will be an outstanding chairman," Proxmire told the economics professor.

GE Agrees on Repairs for 36,000 Microwave Ovens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Electric has agreed to repair a potential radiation leakage problem in 36,000 microwave ovens already installed in homes across the country.

The Food and Drug Administration announced Tuesday it was requiring the repair program — its largest ever involving microwave ovens — "because the door seals on these ovens can deteriorate with use, resulting in a leakage of microwave radiation above that permitted by FDA's strict safety standard."

The ovens involved are GE and Hotpoint "Versatronic" and "Cook Center" combination thermal-microwave units made from November, 1973, through October, 1975. "The repair program is designed to assure that the door seals will meet our safety standard for the entire life of the ovens," the FDA said. "We see no danger from consumer use of the ovens during the time it will take to repair them under this precautionary program."

The FDA said GE will begin notifying owners of the ovens in February that they will be visited by a repairman, giving the party involved about two weeks notice of the visit.

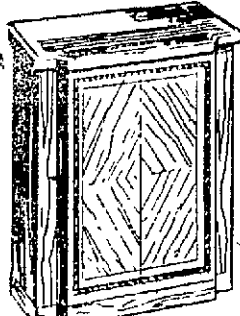

The government has rules governing microwave radiation because excessive amounts can cause problems ranging from burns to interference with electronic heart pacemakers.

This Air Company Features Personalized Service for Animals

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Richard Burns runs an airline for pets.

"Business is good, although it's just been dogs and cats so far, but I'm willing to fly any kind of pet that's manageable," says the mild-mannered Cincinnati grandfather.

While big airline companies crate animals like cargo, Burns' company features personalized service.

"The dogs and cats sit on seats right with me in the plane," he said in an interview. His Animal Air Transport consists of one plane, his own single-engine four-seater, and one pilot, himself.

The biggest selling point in Burns' other occupation: he's a veterinarian.

"I stress responsibility," he said. His veterinary career spans 23 years, and he operates an animal hospital in Cincinnati.

"A lot of people worry about the safety of their pets on big airlines, but I've been flying pets for nearly four years now, and I haven't lost an animal yet. People know the only way they will lose their pet is if I crash."

He is as comfortable at the controls of a plane as he is with his animal passengers.

An Air Force major in World War II, he flew 73 missions over the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. Both he and his plane now meet the same FAA requirements that apply to pilots of company planes for executive use.

He bought his plane originally for personal use.

"...but found I wasn't flying it as much as I thought I would. So to find a purpose for the plane, I came up with flying pets."

His market is bigger than most people might think. Burns books a trip almost every weekend.

"It's mainly when people move great distances. They love their pets and want them to get good care when they travel."

Because the veterinarian

works at his animal hospital throughout the week, he doesn't feel obligated to make a profit on his weekend trips.

"I keep my rates relatively low to keep business up," he said. "I get as much out of the trip as the owners of the pets. I love to fly and go places."

His fares are 30 cents per air statute mile, and he only charges for one way. This means his 16 cents per mile operating cost totals 32 cents a mile for the round-trip.

Burns said he has had no bad experiences with the animals in the plane.

"I never lock dogs up in cages and they've always been good. Even when big dogs like boxers are hyper on the ground before the trip they seem to relax in the air. I don't know if it's the drone of the engine or what, but they usually just sack out on the seat beside me or behind me."

"I also keep cats on the seat, but I do have to put them in a carrier because they're so curious. They would wander all over the plane and before I knew it they'd be snooping around my feet on the rudders and we might have problems."

If bad weather forces an overnight stop in some intermediate city, Burns and his animal passengers go to a motel.

"I only go to motels where they accept animals," he says.

"I never leave my passengers during the trip. If I have to lay over and know I'll be delayed in arriving, I always telephone the pet owner to let him know the pet is with me and safe."

Burns says he enjoys every trip.

"Planes and pets, that's just the right combination for me," he said. "Of course, I do dream about a larger plane for more animals."

WOODSTOCK — It's too bad squirrels can't read signs. One with an adventurous nature took a side trip along one of Central Hudson's power lines Tuesday morning and failed to heed the warning that he was perilously close to the main line to the Woodstock Substation.

Thirteen thousand volts later, 645 customers were without service and the little squirrel had gone to that great forest in the sky.

Power went out at 8:13 a.m. and was restored at 9:55 a.m.

Correction

ULSTER—Lloyd's Red Barn, Boice's Lane and Morton Boulevard in the Town of Ulster, and the New Paltz Red Barn advertised U.S. No. 1 Maine potatoes at 79 cents per 10 pound bag. The correct price should have read 89 cents.

French Boy Joins Port Ewen Troop

PORT EWEN—With the admission of Michel Marcellin of LaGrande France to membership, Boy Scout Troop 26 of Port Ewen takes on an international aspect.

Michel's father, an IBM employee at the LaGrande laboratory, has been assigned to the Kingston IBM complex for a year. Wanting to savor as much as possible of the American experience, Michel joined the local troop.

Language problems have been aided by the fact that Scoutmaster Ed Karabec worked as an interpreter in France and his son Ed, a scout in Troop 26, spoke French before learning English. Committee chairman Felix Van Campenhout who is very active with the troop also is fluent in the French language as he was born in Belgium.

Port Ewen scouting has a tendency for the international. A few years ago, Mrs. Elmer Lyons, a Canadian citizen, was one of the very first people, not an American citizen, to hold the job of den leader in the United States.

SCOUTS

City Girl Scouts On Busy Schedule

KINGSTON—Kingston Neighborhood Association Girl Scouts are looking forward to a busy schedule.

At a business meeting held this week at the First Presbyterian Church, leaders discussed plans for the annual Taste Treat at the Kingston Armory on Feb. 26. Also upcoming is the Girl Scouts 65th Family Reunion Anniversary to be held at Rondout Valley High School March 12.

Spring activities will include a Neighborhood Weekend at Camp Wendy.

In reviewing December activities it was noted that scouts throughout the city performed good deeds for friends and neighbors.

Brownies of Troop 110, Eden School visited Hutton Nursing Home and were invited back for a repeat of last year's Easter Egg Hunt. Brownies of Troop 214, Kennedy School, and Troops 99 and 229 of George Washington School, went caroling at the Hudson Valley Nursing Home and Kingston Plaza.

Junior Troop 6 continued their Adopt-a-Grandparent program of monthly visits to Hadler's Nursing Home on Albany Ave. Other troops made favors for shut-ins and caroled in areas near their troop meeting places.

Cadet Scouts of Troop 175 participated in a two-day ski program at Belleayre which included lessons and recreational skiing.

An Appeal for Leaders Issued in New Paltz

NEW PALTZ—Boy Scout Troops 172 and 272 of New Paltz, associated with the Reformed Church are in need of adult leadership especially assistant scoutmasters.

The troops are presently serving approximately 65 members. The scout committee is calling on parents and other interested persons to donate their time.

An assistant scoutmaster must be an adult male 18 years of age or older. He is directly responsible to the scoutmaster for all aspects of the scouting program including the weekly troop meeting and monthly scout leader meeting. In addition the troops are active monthly in an overnight camping-type activity.

Any eligible member of the community willing to volunteer their services may contact Thomas Benenati, committee chairman. If no adult leadership is available it might be necessary to curtail the scout program, Benenati said.

New Paltz Private Is Recruiter Aide

Harold S. Isen

KINGSTON—Army Private E-2 Harold S. Isen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mel Isen of New Paltz, is giving the U.S. Army Recruiting Station in Kingston a boost for 30-days as one of 450 recruiter aides being assigned nationwide.

PV2 Isen, 18, has completed his basic and advanced individual training as a helicopter repairman at Fort Rucker, Ala.

A 1976 graduate of New Paltz High School, PV2 Isen enlisted in the Army through the Kingston Recruiting Station in August, 1976. He has returned to assist the Kingston and Ulster County Recruiters at their request under the new recruiter aides system.

According to Sergeant First Class Paul J. McCants, commander of the Kingston and Ulster County Recruiting Station, PVT Isen's job will be to assist the local recruiters for a 30-day period while enroute to his first duty station.

Recruiter aides tell their friends, especially high school seniors, about the army and encourage them to talk with recruiters about army enlistment.

SFC McCants said the new program will generate quality leads for army recruiters rather than attempt to enlist individuals for a particular unit. The new program will significantly improve quality recruiting for the army with its emphasis on high school graduates, the sergeant said.

Parents Should Control TV

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Representatives of the broadcast industry suggest that parents take more responsibility for the impact of television on their children.

Eatelle Gould, director of community affairs for WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh, testifying at the National PTA's first regional hearing on television violence, said the most important item is "control of the set."

"A family should watch together," she said.

"I'm not a psychologist, psychiatrist or a teacher, but I have been told by people who are that if an adult watches with a child and is available for an explanation there is less chance of harm from violence and from frightening subject matter."

Roy Danish, director of the Television Information Office in New York, said:

"We broadcasters are doing a great deal to remove gratuitous violence. And more can and will be done in this area. But it would be wrong to present a picture of the world in which there is no conflict — and no aggression."

"And it would be wrong to place the sole responsibility on the broadcaster — parents and educators have a responsibility, too."

Danish discussed what is known about television as a cause of violence in the real world.

The most ambitious investigation was made four years ago under the aegis of the U.S. Surgeon General. It cost more than $1 million and involved dozens of researchers.

"The studies did not conclude with a clear-cut indictment of television," Danish said.

Mrs. Gould, in television since 1950 and also the parent of a college-age son and a daughter in the ninth grade, spoke both as a representative of the television industry and as a mother of two.

"I fully admit that there is violence on television," she said.

"But it is worth remembering that ours is not the first society to merchandise violence as a form of entertainment."

"Violence has always been a part of art, from Greek tragedy

through Shakespearean drama, up to modern times.

"Since the earliest two-reel Mack Sennet comedies, violence has been a staple of movies, though it has expressed different attitudes and different social values over the years.

"The violence shown is a reflection of what is happening in the world. Television is a mirror of conditions ... it does not initiate them."

Danish said the amount of violence on television is being cut down. According to a study done for CBS, the incidence of violence in prime time on the three networks was cut 24 per cent from 1974-75 to 1975-76. The study spanned a 13-week period.

"The current season," Danish said, "has fewer programs with an opportunity for violence. And in every time period with series programs the viewer has the choice of at least one nonviolent network show."

"The possibility of lack of choice does occur on parts of three evenings where two movies are shown at the same time — but a check of schedules for this past season shows that both movies contained violent scenes only one time out of five."

"And of course, there is the alternate programming provided by stations not affiliated with networks and by public television stations as well ...

"The three networks also have specialists who preview all programs and work with producers at all stages of script development," Danish said.

"The networks, like most stations, subscribe to the Television Code of the National Association of Broadcasters. The networks and the Code Authority employ 150 persons at an annual cost of $4 million.

"The Television Code recognizes that children should be exposed, at the appropriate times, to a reasonable range of the realities which exist in the world," Danish said.

"There are programs that deal with history, government and biography, with biology and astronomy, with the environment and animal life and with the seas and the stars."

"Youngsters are literally given a worldwide view of people and places through tele-

It Takes 22 Seconds To Rip Off a CB Unit

By UPI

A crafty "chicken snatcher" can rip off a mobile CB rig in precisely 22 seconds, according to one New Yorker who declined to say how he knew.

A police captain in Michigan estimates that the average life of a CB radio in a car is just 28 days.

In one Southwest city the lifespan of a car unit is even shorter — 16 days.

"The theft of CB auto radio transceivers has become the biggest single object of larceny in the U.S. today," says Wilbur Rykert, executive director of the National Crime Prevention Association in Washington, D.C.

The "chicken snatchers" or "midnight shoppers," as thieves are known in CB lingo, have found a lucrative black market for radios, just as they did for auto tape players a few years ago.

"There is a tremendous black market for CB radios," says Bill Kanner, editor of CB World magazine. "There are flea markets on Long Island where you can get a practically new rig for about $15."

And law enforcement officers and insurance companies expect even more thefts with the coming on the market of the new 40-channel sets.

The thievery has already led to higher insurance costs for CB operators in some areas.

"The rates established for auto insurance never anticipated such heavy losses," said John P. Kennedy, vice president of Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies.

To help police return a stolen set to its owner, the radio should be engraved with a personal identification number, such as a serial number or a driver's license number.

And to help dry up the black market, buy from only established retailers.

Organized Poaching Is Biggest Threat

Last Great Herds of Wildlife Face Extinction

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The world's last great wildlife herds are facing extinction.

Within five to 10 years, the vast herds of elephant, rhino, lion and other species which once roamed East Africa's plains will be wiped out, according to experts.

The human population explosion, the destruction of the environment and a continuing drought have all played their part in decimating earth's last great concentration of game.

But the biggest threat of all has come from organized gangs of poachers armed with bows and poison arrows, wire snares, poison darts, muzzle loaders and machine guns who are often protected by the highest authorities in the area.

Foreign experts have been protesting for years the herds are in great danger.

Some African governments, newspapers and the public are at last also beginning to sense the end may be near and it is probably too late to now save the herds.

Figures, often imprecise and difficult to obtain, are nevertheless appalling.

In the last six months in Kenya's Tsavo Park, 1,040 elephants, 235 rhino and 20 leopards were reported killed and the overall elephant population declined from 36,000 in 1973-74 to a little more than 20,000 in June of 1976.

In the Nairobi National Park on the outskirts of the capital zebra have declined from 15,000 to 1,500 in the last two years.

World renowned wildlife artist David Shepherd said in a recent interview Kenya's 100,000 elephants were being poached at a rate of 10,000 a year and would be extinct in a decade. Kenya member of parliament John Konchellah said 16,000 elephants in the Mara reserve in western Kenya had been poached since the start of the year.

Kenyan legislators demanded an inquiry into alleged complicity in the poaching racket by sections of the Ministry of Tourism and Wildlife.

They produced figures which reportedly showed that though more than 600 tons of Kenyan ivory had been imported into Hong Kong and Japan, only 114 tons of this same ivory had been "officially" exported from Kenya itself.

Wildlife officials estimate poachers would have to shoot 30,000 elephants to produce 500 tons of ivory.

Minister Mathews Ogutu denied ministry complicity and defied strong parliamentary and press pressure to resign his office.

The situation in surrounding countries was less clear, though reports available from Tanzania, Uganda and Ethiopia all pointed to widespread poaching and destruction of the herds there as well.

An official report said 543 poachers had been arrested in Tanzania in the first few months of the year, the bulk of them in the famed Serengeti Park.

Thousands of elephants in Tanzania have been slaughtered in recent years and the ivory shipped to China to help pay for the Chinese-built Tanzam railroad from Dar es Salaam to the Zambia copper fields.

A favorite sport of President Idi Amin's unruly troops in Uganda has been to gun down vast numbers of elephants with machine guns, reports said, and even the crocodile population on the River Nile has been decimated in the same manner. Game wardens in Uganda are powerless to intervene.

In Ethiopia recent news reports said that country's most popular game park, the Awash National Park, has been invaded by domestic animals such as cows and sheep from surrounding tribes and lion and cheetah have all but disappeared.

There has been an ominous new development in Kenya's northern areas where heavily armed bands from neighboring Somalia have begun to launch well organized raids into the interior, wiping out entire species in some regions.

Kenya's Lake Nakuru which was once home for two to three million pink flamingoes is now also threatened with strangulation and death, apparently by industrial pollution. Many of the birds have already left what was once described as the greatest bird spectacle in the world.

The World Wildlife Fund, whose contributions to Kenya since 1961 have topped $25 million, announced last fall it had imposed a moratorium on all fresh financial aid to Nairobi.

Bill Monks, the fund's local secretary, was quoted as saying, "we are not convinced of the government's good faith concerning wildlife conservation."

The world environment report of the U.N. environment program said public opinion in Kenya was at last taking note that "the national parks of Kenya, which contain the world's last great reservoir of wildlife, are being subject to massive and unprecedented depredation."

"Reports are circulating that organized gangs of poachers operating on a commercial scale are obliterating game at such rapid rate that even common animals face the danger of extinction."

Legislators demanded establishment of a special select committee to investigate the threat to wildlife and the ministries allegedly involved, but parliament recessed for a vacation without taking any action.

Members of President Jomo Kenyatta's family, including wife Mama Ngina and daughter Margaret, the Mayor of Nairobi, in the past have been named in some circles as having been involved in the poaching racket — moving the official Kenya news agency at one stage to release a five-page report denying the charges as blackmail and scandal.

This same report said statements the elephants would be wiped out with a decade were "guesswork."

Poaching is the most serious threat to the herds, but not the only one.

A drought which has persisted for several years has killed off thousands of animals.

East Africa has one of the highest birth rates in the world and wildlife conservationists concede that governments will always put people before animals in allocating valuable land.

Large tracts, however, have already been turned into virgin to make charcoal which is sold at a high profit in the Middle East.

But as the rain forests have tual desert because of human destruction of the terrain.

A major industry in Kenya is to chop down any and all trees been cut down, the surrounding areas have been turned into wastelands as the weather pattern was altered.

Even the Natural Gas Freezes as Cold Continues Midlands Grip

(By UPI)
It's so cold in the nation's midlands that even natural gas is freezing.

Arctic temperatures froze a natural gas line near Phillips, Neb., Monday, knocking out heat for several hours, and subzero cold in some areas of the upper Midwest turned natural gas to a useless jelly and kept propane gas from vaporizing.

Demand for fuel oil outstripped supplies in some areas and some utilities curtailed services.

The eastern two-thirds of the nation shivered from a raging snowstorm that dumped heavy snow from the Midwest to New England.

That storm has been blamed for at least 52 deaths.

The mercury plunged to 35 below zero in the upper Midwest and to 20 to 25 below zero in the Ohio Valley and the Ozarks Monday.

Oswego Buried by 18 Inches

(By UPI)
Some improvement was in sight after two-days of heavy snowfall in some sections of New York State, but the weatherman promised very cold temperatures would linger across the state for at least another day.

The National Weather Service predicted cloudiness throughout much of the state today with snow and flurries. The weather service, however, said it appears that the snow should be much lighter than the amounts which fell in part of the state Monday and Tuesday.

Among the hardest hit areas Tuesday was the city of Oswego, on the southeastern shore of Lake Ontario. A state of snow emergency was declared in the city Tuesday after 18 inches of snow fell on the area since the storm began Monday.

Oswego police said no traffic was moving in or out of the city which has a population of about 24,000. Officials estimated that the snow was falling at the rate of about two to three inches an hour, on top of the four-foot drifts which had already fallen.

The mid-section of the state was the victim of a "lake effect" storm which drifted further south than usual, the weather service said.

Winds of up to 40 miles per hour whipped the snow throughout the Syracuse-area and caused the cancellation of flights at Hancock Airport. The snow also caused schools in eight surrounding counties to cancel classes.

Many industries canceled second shifts in the Syracuse area and many workers were sent home early because of the storm.

In the western half of the state, residents continued to dig-out from a storm Monday which the national weather service called the worst in the area in "four or five years."

Most schools in the Buffalo and Rochester areas closed for the second straight day Tuesday. Four deaths in the Buffalo area were blamed on the storm, which dumped up to a foot of snow.

The national weather service predicted temperatures to dip to near or below zero tonight, with the possibility of new snow in Western New York Thursday as a new low pressure system advances into the state.

Columbia Village Seeks Aid

PHILMONT, N.Y. (UPI) — Columbia County officials said Tuesday they would seek state and federal aid for this fire-ravaged village, in the aftermath of a blaze which destroyed a plastics company and several nearby buildings. Sheriff Paul Proper said a representative from Gov. Hugh Carey's office in Albany was being sent to survey the damage at the X-Tal International Corp. from an hour-long fire that destroyed a factory and four other buildings, forced evacuation of more than 30 families and caused minor injuries to 31 persons, including firemen.

Proper, who said no monetary estimate was available, said the county would seek aid in whatever form available. He said the village of 1,700 persons was virtually off-limits to traffic during the fire. Electricity was later restored in the fire area, and crews worked to get phone service back in operation.

consin and freezing temperatures were expected from Louisiana to northern Florida. Two major power companies in Michigan — Consumers Power Co. and Detroit Edison

Co. — declared temporary electric emergencies Monday because of bitter cold and reduced voltage in their systems by 5 per cent because of heavy demand.

The Mississippi Valley Gas Co. announced severe curtailments of natural gas for industrial customers in 118 Mississippi towns and cities. "We have never experienced temperatures such as this," a spokesman said. The Tennessee Valley Authority, strapped by severe cold, said it may have to order power cutbacks — affecting industries and other large users first — unless the power drain diminishes. Jerry Everett, executive director of the Northwest Petroleum Association in Minnesota, said the prolonged cold wave has created "severe strain on all energy products." "If it continues this severely cold," Everett said, "we may need to go into an emergency situation this weekend or early next week." At least five ships — including one tanker — were locked in ice on the Great Lakes. Bank-to-bank ice slowed tra-
